Racket Quiz Slows Down; Use by GOP Is Expected

Attempts to Link Corruption With Democratic City Machines Feared

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Kefauver organized crime investigation yesterday ran into an Administration slowdown as top Democratic leaders voiced fears the GOP would try to use it as "a political vehicle."

One Administration spokesman, who asked not to be identified, told The Washington Post:

"The investigation would be wide open, and made to order for their purposes. There isn't any doubt in my mind that they would try to use it to the disadvantage of the Democrats."

He mentioned as possible GOP crime targets the Kansas City votes fraud case and other big city organizations, nearly all of them Democratic-controlled.

Cited also was an earlier Republican attempt to link Frank Costello, whose "tygoon" operations were recently disclosed in a Washington Post series, with the Washington "5 percent" traffic.

Administration suspicions that Republicans "would try to walk off with another Senate investigation" at least partially accounted for the trouble Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) has been having in getting his "full and complete" crime investigation resolution through the Senate.

Cleared by two Democratic-controlled Senate committees (Judiciary and Rules) and now on the Senate calendar, his resolution was still stalled last night pending a special meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, composed of top leaders.

Indications were it may be definitely limited in scope before it gets Policy Committee clearance. As one member of the party steering group said: "I would like to know where this investigation is going, and what it intends to do."

While Kefauver was having "green light" trouble, a newly organized crime investigation, paralleling the authority in his own resolution but aimed at more specific goals, was getting under way.

The duplicating resolution was introduced only Tuesday by Senate Interstate Commerce Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) on the strength of two anti-crime bills sent to Congress last weekend by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, and referred to Johnson's committee. One of the measures bans interstate ship-

Fugitive Near Top Of FBI List Dies In Desert Gunfight

Mojave, Calif., April 5 (AP).—One of the most-wanted criminals on the FBI's lists was shot and killed today in a running gunfight across the Mojave desert.

Lennon

The FBI in Los Angeles identified him as Fred Walter Lennon, 39, "sought in many cities throughout the country, and by the Federal Government for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution."

Lennon was shot, the FBI said, by one of its agents and California Highway Patrolman Sam H. McDaniel, on Highway 466 some 10 miles west of here.

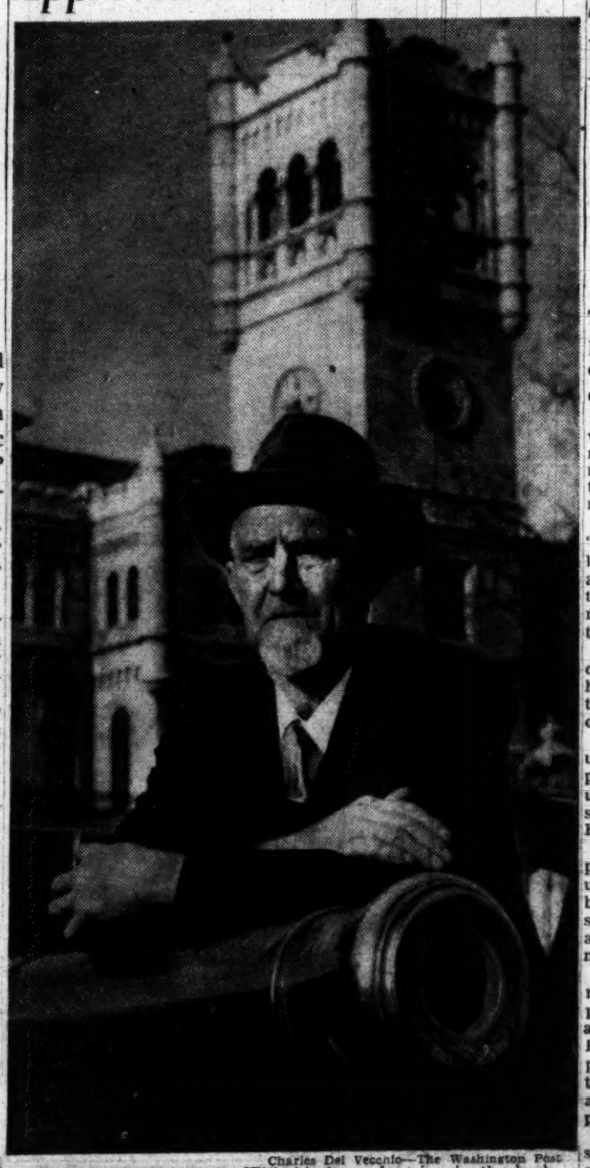
$13,500,000 Building Project Approved for Soldiers' Home



Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

A VOICE IN PROTEST—With his home looming in the background, Daniel T. Kitzmiller, 77, Spanish War veteran, yesterday added his voice to the many protests from oldtimers at Soldiers' Home deploring the proposed building program. "We don't want any changes," insisted Kitzmiller, who with his white goatee looks like Uncle Sam—a role he has played many times.

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Soldiers' Home here, which is losing almost one-third of its coveted land, has gained the go-ahead signal for a $13,500,000 building program, it was learned yesterday.

The heretofore undisclosed concession by the Bureau of the Budget which had repeatedly denied the Home its requests to expand, was confirmed by Col. D. C. Cordiner, deputy governor for Soldiers' Home.

Other developments yesterday in the fast-moving land acquisition maneuvers included:

1. The non-profit corporation sponsoring the Washington Medical Center met and voted to recommend acceptance of the 47-acre, southwest sector of Soldiers' Home land now available as a site for the new hospital center.

2. Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., gave official notice to the General Services Administration that the Nevius Tract, in Arlington, Va., is surplus to VA needs. GSA, by law, is now required to determine what other Federal agencies need the land, or whether it should be sold.

3. VA officials said test borings will be started soon at Soldiers' Home land sites for a new 500-bed veterans' hospital, and a multi-storied building to accomo-

Chrysler Studies New UAW Pension Plan; Hope Rises

Detroit, April 5 (AP).—A new and different union pension proposal brought the biggest break to date in the 71-day Chrysler strike today.

The company admitted it was "considering" the peace offer by the CIO-United Auto Workers.

This statement immediately boosted hopes for a quick return to work of 89,000 Chrysler strikers and some 50,000 other persons idled indirectly by the long shutdown.

Federal and State mediators recessed negotiations indefinitely as settlement prospects brightened.

Soviet-E. German Military Aid Pact Reported in Berlin

Berlin, April 5 (AP).—Russia has secretly bound the East German republic to an agreement for mutual military assistance, a responsible political source asserted here tonight.

This source said contents of the agreement are being disclosed to Eastern satellite chiefs now in Budapest celebrating Hungary's liberation by the Red army five years ago. The agreement is in the shape of a draft which has been initialed by Soviet negotiators and East German Foreign Minister Georg Dertinger, the source added.

The timing for changing the draft to a formal treaty depends on how soon the rival Bonn republic enters the European Council and whether it will then go on to membership in the Atlantic military system.

Mother Bear Loses One Cub In Fierce Zoo Battle With Lion

Oakland, Calif., April 5 (AP).—A mother bear, defending her two cubs, fought a losing battle with a powerful African lion early today at the Alameda County Zoo.

Before the savage fight ended, one of the bear cubs was killed—its neck apparently broken by a blow—and the mother bear had retreated with her surviving cub to a wooden shelf in the bear cage.

The snarls and roars of the beasts, heard a quarter of a mile away, brought human intervention and the battle never was fought to a finish.

Instead, the lion Simba, and its mate, Fury, were herded back into their own cage by Zoo Director Sidney Snow. There, in an almost human reaction, they became meek and trembling in the aftermath of combat.

Mrs. Snow, wife of the zoo director, and her daughter, Sidnia, came upon the fight's climax shortly after midnight. They heard the noise and came over to see what caused it.

"Simba was standing over the dead cub, Jinx, a 2-year-old black female," Mrs. Snow said. "He apparently had just killed her, but made no attempt to eat.

"The mother — we call her 'Mama' — and her other cub, 'Lucky,' also 2 years old, were up on their wooden sleeping box. Mama was well back, taking what cover she could from the box, but she was protecting the youngster and growling defiance.

"Simba, standing over his kill, looked up at her from time to time and made an angry growl. Simba's mate, Fury, also was in the bear cage, but she seemed to be taking no part in the fight."

Transit Firm Asked to Curb Pass Abuses

PUC Requests Plan For Controlling Use Of Weekly Ticket At Fare Hearing

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Continuation of the Capital Transit Co. 17-year-old weekly pass became the focal point of the hearing on fare increases yesterday.

As the hearing recessed for three weeks, James H. Flanagan, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, said the proposed abolition of the pass "gives this commission the most concern."

He asked company officials to "explore all possible ways" to limit use of the passes and remove abuses claimed by the firm, and to report back when the hearings resume on April 26 at 10 a. m. in the District Building.

J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller of the CTC, who said he had been a strong supporter of the pass, was outspoken in charges of abuse.

"I do not consider it a proper use of Government funds to buy passes which are used by individuals and their families for personal use" outside of office hours, Heberle declared.

He said about 2000 weekly passes are sold to governmental units on what amounts to a credit basis, since payments are received several weeks after requisitions are submitted and passes furnished.

He said professional and business firms let employes use the passes themselves during the day and their families in the evenings. Frequently housewives purchase passes for maids and then use them themselves during the day, which amounts to two persons on one pass, Heberle pointed out.

In effect, the company has been subsidizing Government agencies and others by furnishing transportation at less than cost, Heberle testified.

Eight of the 27 citizens opposing the fare increase at the opening of the hearing Tuesday concentrated their fire on the company proposal to end the weekly pass. The company also seeks a 15-cent-cash fare and sale of six tokens at 80 cents. Present fares are 13 cents each, three tokens for 35 cents and $1.75 for a weekly pass.

PUC Chairman Flanagan raised the weekly pass issue yesterday by reminding Heberle that a rider purchasing tokens using two transfers on each trip is paying less than 4 cents a ride, while by Heberle's own figures the average rider on a weekly pass makes 35 trips at a cost of 5 cents each.

Heberle testified that the weekly pass has been discontinued in Pittsburgh and St. Louis, and that Des Moines is now asking to end it. Los Angeles, Cleveland and Milwaukee still retain the pass. In the last city the rate was reduced from $1.50 to $1.40 while cash and token fares were hiked.

Earlier, Heberle, the principal company witness, testified that the proposed fares would yield an additional $1,959,879, which would result in a 7.1 percent rate of return on the rate base as computed by PUC, or 4.5 percent on the company-computed rate base. In 1948, the PUC set 7.5 percent as a fair rate of return for the firm.

The PUC base is $27,713,039 and is predicated on original costs. The company base, which has never been allowed by the Commission, is $43,764,571 and includes replace-

32 Degrees Predicted For Tonight

Canada Cold Front Arrives, Dropping Mercury From 80 To 55 in 24 Hours

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

A mass of cool air, sweeping in on Washington from Canada's Hudson Bay region, was due to send temperatures down to 36 degrees in the District and 34 in the suburbs early today.

Forecasters said that northwesterly winds probably would distribute temperatures evenly enough to save the suburbs from below-freezing temperatures during the night.

But they predicted a low of 32 degrees—freezing—in the city and a 26-degree low in the suburbs early Friday.

The forecast for today calls for mostly sunny skies, plus an afternoon high of about 50 degrees.

Temperatures were expected to go much lower in the mountainous regions of western Maryland overnight—between 25 and 30 degrees early today. Western Virginia would shiver under 30 to 35 degrees, the Weather Bureau said.

Observers said the cold front from Canada passed over Washington about 4 a. m. yesterday, but cold air continued to flow into the District as night approached.

From Tuesday's near-record high of 80 degrees at 4 p. m., the low yesterday morning was 46 degrees at 10:40 a. m. The thermometer rose to 55 degrees at 4 p. m. yesterday, then began to fall.

Mild Weather Forecast

Meantime, the Weather Bureau went out on a cherry tree limb to predict mild temperatures for the Blossom Festival Saturday and Sunday.

The extended forecast called for warmer beginning Friday afternoon.

If this is the case, National Capital Parks said yesterday, Washington's cherry trees can be "expected" to bloom for the festival.

Plant experts doubted that the current cool spell would hurt the trees. At most, they said, the blooms would be retarded.

Tulip Magnolias Frostbitten

Also doing well, he said, were star magnolias, and — on the grounds of the Pan-American Union—a Japanese weeping cherry tree (like a regular Japanese cherry tree but with larger, drooping limbs).

But Kelly also reported that 90 percent of the tulip magnolias around town—with the exception of those on the south ground of the White House—were killed off by a cool spell last week.

The cool spell also killed off last Saturady's performance of the Cherry Blossom Festival.

The pageant will be repeated, even to a "recrowning" of the Queen, at 1 p. m. Saturday and at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Tickets are on sale at the District of Columbia Information Center in the lobby of the Evening Star Building, or may be purchased at the Watergate Saturday and Sunday.

Truman Defers Gas Decision; Prepares Welcome for Videla

Key West, Fla., April 5 (AP).—President Truman put off a decision today on whether to sign the controversial natural gas bill and laid plans for a warm welcome for the President of Chile.

He looked over a flood of telegrams both from advocates of the gas measure and those who insisted he should veto it.

The measure, which squeaked through the House by a two-vote margin, would prohibit the Federal Power Commission from fixing the price of gas delivered to the pipelines by independent producers.

Meanwhile, Mr. Truman directed Brig. Gen. Robert B. Landry, his Air Force aide, to depart Thursday for Santiago in the White House plane, the Independence, to fly President Gabriel Gonzales Videla to the United States Tuesday night for a state visit.

The Chilean Chief Executive and his wife will occupy Mr. Truman's "winter White House" on this naval submarine base Tuesday night and fly to Washington Wednesday to be entertained at a "white tie" dinner at the Hotel Carlton Wednesday night by President and Mrs. Truman.

In order to make his own plane available to the visitors, the President will fly back to Washington about 10 a. m. (EST) Monday in the Dew Drop, a plush Constellation of the Military Air Transport Service.

Mrs. Truman plans to leave here Friday for Washington, but Margaret disclosed she will fly back with her dad Monday.

Meanwhile Presidential Secretary Ross disclosed that the President, between work on official papers and trips to the beach, is reading "with great interest" a new book by Nathaniel Weyl, entitled "Treason."

Mayors of 18 Cities Urge Veto of Gas Bill

The mayors of 18 big cities joined yesterday in a request to President Truman to veto the Kerr natural gas bill "on behalf of the millions of consumers in our cities."

The Kerr bill, passed by narrow margins in the House and Senate, would exempt independent producers of natural gas from price regulation by the Federal Power Commission.

A telegram to Mr. Truman at Key West, Fla., urging his veto was signed by the mayors of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Denver, Toledo, Birmingham, Akron and St. Paul.

Hearing Set for April 13

McCarthy May List Witnesses For Loyalty Probe to Subpena

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator McCarthy's "mystery witnesses" against Owen Lattimore may appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on April 13, a week from today, to give their evidence in a public hearing.

The Wisconsin Republican said that Subcommittee Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) had set the date for his witnesses and that he, McCarthy, will work over the weekend in New York to see if they will be willing to come.

If so, he will presumably turn over their names to Tydings, so that the latter may issue subpenas for them. Tydings refused an earlier request of McCarthy to let him serve the subpenas himself.

Lattimore, the key target of McCarthy's charges, will testify before the subcommittee in his own behalf at 10:30 this morning. The Johns Hopkins University professor has called McCarthy's charges that he is a Soviet espionage agent and a Communist an unmitigated lie.

The agreement, informal but apparently solid, for McCarthy to produce his witnesses came as the climax of a two-day "battle of communiques" between McCarthy and Tydings.

On Tuesday, Tydings asked McCarthy for his files to back up his charges. McCarthy replied with what amounted to a refusal, saying he would furnish only what "I consider of value" to the subcommittee. Tydings then asked that, whatever it was, it be turned over by noon yesterday.

Yesterday, McCarthy wrote Tydings another letter, asking, in effect, "What's the hurry?"

He said he had given Tydings' subcommittee a "great wealth of material" in his previous testimony

Acheson Hints New Top Posts Are Set Up for Republicans

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson hinted yesterday that more Republicans might be appointed soon to important State Department posts in an effort to restore effective bipartisanship in foreign policy.

Former Senator John S. Cooper of Kentucky has already been sworn in as an Ambassador-at-Large. Acheson told his press conference that he was not at liberty to say anything about the appointments of others, but might be able to talk about it before long.

Presumably President Truman will announce the next Republican appointment, which is expected to be that of John Foster Dulles as another roving Ambassador.

[The Associated Press reported late last night in a dispatch from Key West, Fla., where Mr. Truman is vacationing, that the President's press secretary, Charles G. Ross, had denied Dulles would be named. "It is not so," he was quoted as saying.—Editor's Note.]

Acheson did say, however, that he and his department were pushing ahead vigorously in trying to get the views of Republicans on foreign policy questions.

Thirty senators, including many Republicans, have come to the State Department recently at Acheson's invitation for informed "briefing" and discussions on contentious problems of foreign policy.

Among them has been Senator

Guatemala Asks Patterson Recall, Charges Plotting

NYHT News Service

The turbulent little republic of Guatemala has asked the United States to recall Ambassador Richard C. Patterson, jr., it was learned yesterday. Guatemala charges Patterson has "intervened" in domestic affairs.

The semi-official Guatemalan press accused the United States of plotting through Patterson to overthrow the government.

Patterson arrived in Washington last Thursday amid reports he had received threats and would seek a Marine guard for the embassy.

Brigham Young Statue Gets House Approval

Marine Corps Headquarters yesterday announced a reshuffling of top commanders in which 15 generals will change jobs between now and next fall.

Both of the corps' divisions and most of its principal bases will get new commanders under the shift.

Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, commandant of the Marine Corps Schools and Base at Quantico, Va., was assigned as commander of the Pacific Fleet Marine Force, with headquarters in Hawaii.

He will be succeeded at Quantico by Maj. Gen. Franklin A. Hart, now commander of the Second Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, N. C. The shift will take place in July.

Other transfers include:

Maj. Gen. Ray A. Robinson, now inspector general of the Marines, to succeed Hart at Lejeune.

Corning Can Read, Baxter Can Write, Lee Can Blush

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning had his knuckles rapped yesterday by Board Member Adelbert W. Lee because he hadn't read a book.

The book was one that the Williams College Alumni Association of Washington proposes to give to a senior at Wilson High School as a citizenship award.

When Corning admitted he had not read the book, Lee said the board had no way of knowing whether the book was "desirable."

"The president of Williams College is a reputable person," Corning said.

Lee countered that the college president also might be recommending a book he hadn't read.

"But he wrote it," said Corning.

The book was the 1947 Pulitzer prize winner, "Scientists Against Time," by Dr. James Phinney Baxter, 3d.

Dust Storms Provide Warning

Dry Weather and Insects Threatening Winter Wheat

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Dry weather and widespread infestations by insects are seriously threatening the winter wheat crop in the Southern Great Plains Area.

Reports of damage have been so far-flung and general that some experts already are predicting this year's harvest may fall below the billion-bushel mark for the first time since 1944.

The news, which in recent years would have caused world-wide alarm, is being accepted in some quarters with a measure of satisfaction. If early predictions come true, they would tend to lessen the Nation-wide criticism of the farm price support system with its ever-increasing expenditures. The burden on officials charged with administering price supports and providing storage for the mounting surpluses also would be eased.

Official crop estimates will not be available until Monday, when the year's first Government forecast by the Crop Reporting Board will be made. It will deal with conditions on April 1. Damage occurring between then and April 10 will not be reflected in the estimates.

The warning of serious damage from drought was broadcast by nature itself in recent weeks. Duststorms—almost forgotten since the tragic days of the prewar Dust Bowl—have returned to Midwestern States, indicating serious and extensive lack of moisture.

Congress likewise was dramatically informed of the insect damage by a row on the Senate floor. Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) succeeded, through a parliamentary maneuver, in blocking an

Kilgore DP Bill Passes; Senate Kills Tight Curbs

Administration Wins Liberalization Fight; McCarran Provisions Defeated, 25 to 49

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

After a grueling fight, the Administration last night won its fight to liberalize the Displaced Persons law when the Senate, by a vote of 49 to 25, adopted the Kilgore bill as a substitute for one offered by the Judiciary Committee.

Vote on final passage of the measure, which came shortly before midnight, was 58-15. The Senate has asked for a conference with the House to iron out the differences between the Senate bill and that passed last session by the House.

The substitute measure was offered by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and 17 other Senators of both parties.

Breakdown of Voting

On the vote to substitute the Kilgore provisions for the McCarran measure the party division was:

For substituting, 25 Democrats and 24 Republicans.

Against substituting, 11 Democrats and 14 Republicans.

On final passage of the substitute bill, the breakdown was:

For passage, 27 Democrats and 31 Republicans.

Against passage, 8 Democrats and 7 Republicans.

For more than 12 hours, the Senate slugged its way through 135 amendments. Party lines were shattered in the unusual voting alignment.

Of the proposed amendments, most were sponsored by the Senate Judiciary Committee, headed by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), who has been leading a six-month struggle to tighten up the laws governing the admission of displaced person to this country.

As the bill now stands, the United States will admit 344,000 displaced persons, 54,744 expellees of German ethic origin and 20,000 non-quota war orphans.

The total of displaced persons was raised in the Kilgore substitute from 339,000 to 344,000 on a motion by Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.).

The Kilgore substitute retains the International Refugee Organization's definition of displaced persons.

Navy Helicopter Runs Amok, Kills 2 Aboard Carrier

Norfolk, Va., April 5 (AP).—A Navy helicopter broke from its deck lashings aboard a carrier at sea and its whirling blades killed two officers, the Navy announced today. Several others were hurt, two critically.

The mishap took place yesterday afternoon aboard the carrier Wright which was a day out of Quonset, R. I., on training maneuvers. The ship put into Norfolk and the injured were transferred to the Portsmouth Naval Hospital.

Dead were Lieut. Herbert N. Walters of Lindale, Texas, and Lieut. Carl W. Baker of Amarillo, Texas. Walters' wife is Lieut. Comdr. Bernice R. Walters, whose recent orders made her the first woman doctor to be assigned to a Navy ship at sea.

Reported critically hurt by the naval hospital are Lieut. (jg) Robert O. Davis, Gallipolis, Ohio, the helicopter pilot, and Lieut. Thurman Newell, hangar deck officer. Davis has a possible spine fracture and Newell suffered "major injuries."

Due to its construction, a helicopter must keep its blades in rotation until less than 25 knots of wind is passing over the blades.

The pilot kept the blades rotating while waiting for the carrier to turn out of the wind. The front wheel and the right wheel had been lashed down, but not the left wheel. Too much pitch was maintained on the whirling blades and suddenly the aircraft tore loose from its deck lashings.

Ship doctors went to work while the Wright turned about and steamed to Norfolk under forced draft.

GOP Offers 5-Point 'Prosperity' Program

NYHT News Service

The House Republican leadership let go a broadside today at "extravagant" deficit spending programs and "economic witch doctors" of the Truman Administration.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Republican floor leader and former Speaker of the House, led off the attack. He assailed President Truman's "reckless program" and the Administration's "spenders and princes of planning." He presented what he called a five-point "non-partisan prosperity program" to slash spending, reduce taxes and promote business.

"Almost five million jobless Americans are crying for action," and are "five million reasons why" President Truman and congressional leaders should adopt his program, Martin said. His five points are: (1) remove wartime excise taxes; (2) create tax incentives for small business; (3) balance the budget and begin retirement of the national debt; (4) administer the tariff program more carefully; (5) remove the "threat of socialism that hangs over the country."

Representative Leslie C. Arends of Illinois, Republican whip of the House, followed with a statement that "complete national bankruptcy" will be "the inevitable result" of the Administration's "reckless spending policy."

Both were discussing the omnibus appropriations bill, carrying funds of $29,045,030,164, from which Representative Taber of New York, former chairman and now ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, hopes to slash at least one billion dollars. Although now before the House, the measure will not come to a vote until after the Easter recess.

Martin declared the pending bill "is the symbol of 18 years of irresponsible political philosophy in our Government," which, he said, "for 157 years—until 1933—withstood the onslaughts of the economic witch doctors who numerous times during that period attempted to gain power by advocating their quackeries."

He asserted that while "the very security of America is at stake, irresponsible men and irresponsible leaders insist on gambling with that security to achieve their own ends" by continuing deficit spending when a sound Governmental fiscal policy is needed to face possible future economic or military threats.

"This pump-priming for disaster must stop," Martin said. "These economic quackeries must end. These socialistic schemers and political medicine men who now infect the executive branch must be run out of Washington."

Leon H. Keyserling, acting chairman of President Truman's Council of Economic Advisors, who Martin said regards a certain amount of unemployment as "permanent" and who has said there may be 12 million unemployed by 1954, "is one of the medicine men," Martin said, and his talk is "tommyrot."

FTC Complaint
Misleading Cigarette Ads Charged

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday ordered makers of Camels and Old Gold cigarettes to end "misleading" advertising and disclosed it soon may clamp down on claims made for three other well-known brands.

The Commission said all cigarettes contain nicotine and throat irritants. No brand may reliably advertise that it is superior to any other brand on these qualities, it held.

Cease and desist orders were issued again R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Jersey City, N. J., manufacturers of Camels, and P. Lorillard Co., Jersey City, manufacturer of Old Golds. The companies may appeal the ruling to the courts.

The FTC announced that a trial examiner has recommended similar action against the American Tobacco Co., New York, for allegedly false advertising for Lucky Strike cigarettes.

Others Under Investigation

Still under investigation are complaints against advertising claims for Philip Morris cigarettes, made by Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., New York, and Pall Mall cigarettes, made by the American Cigarette & Cigar Co., New York.

Camels may no longer claim that they do not impair the physical condition of athletes, that they are soothing to smokers, that they ease nervous strain, or that they leave the smoker free from "after-taste," according to terms of the FTC order.

Camels are barred from playing up testimonials by "name" individuals—unless the testimonials are "factually true."

The FTC accused Old Gold of misrepresenting a Reader's Digest article on cigarettes. It said its advertisements failed to reveal that tests cited in the articles showed "insignificant" difference between cigarette brands in amounts of harmful substancse.

Prohibitions on Old Golds

Old Golds must, under the order, halt claims that that brand will not irritate the mouth or throat, that it is cool and free from bite, burn or harshness.

Under the examiner's proposed order against American Tobacco Co., advertising for Lucky Strikes would have to cut out claims that independent tobacco experts prefer Luckies "2 to 1."

The FTC commented that smoke is an irritant that will "irritate disordered throats," and excessive smoking of any brand will irritate "even throats in normal healthy condition."

"There is no known practical process by which the nicotine, tars and resins in the tobacco leaf may be removed or substantially reduced without at the same time denaturing the tobacco and rendering it unsatisfactory for use in the manufacture of cigarettes," the commission said.

It said tests with six leading brands show that the amount of nicotine in tobacco and smoke varies greatly—but that the variation is as much between individual cigarettes of the same brand as between brands.

It is impossible to standardize the content of nicotine and irritants in cigarettes, the FTC concluded.

Camel Makers Deny Using 'Misleading' Ads

Winston-Salem, N. C., April 5 (U.P.).—The makers of Camel cigarettes, ordered by the Federal Trade Commission to stop "false and misleading" advertising, said today they had "never used any advertising themes known to be false."

P. Frank Hanes, vice president at Reynolds, said that "all the advertising themes complained of by the commission were discontinued more than five years ago, most of them even before the complaint was issued in 1942."

"Notwithstanding the order of the commission," Hanes said, "officers of the Reynolds company emphatically said that they had never used any advertising themes known to be false."

Action Unjustified, Lorillard Declares

In New York, Lorillard said in a statement:

"P. Lorillard Co. denies that it has been guilty of any intentional false and misleading advertising and is of the opinion that the decision and order of the Federal Trade Commission are unjustified.

"In fact, our nationally famous slogan, 'A treat instead of a treatment,' with no therapeutic claims of any kind whatsoever, clearly states the company's advertising philosophy.

"Most of the allegations of the complaint, which was filed more than seven years ago, deals with advertising matter which has long ago been discontinued by the company."

Science Bill Conferees In Agreement

Senate-House conferees agreed yesterday to provide $500,000 for the first year's operation of the proposed National Science Foundation and to build up eventually to a 15-million-dollar annual limit.

This was announced as the conferees postponed final action on a compromise between House and Senate versions of the legislation until after the House returns from its Easter recess.

The measure would establish a foundation under Government auspices for research in all branches of science, with funds for scholarships and research contracts in the United States and abroad.

The conferees agreed tentatively Tuesday to eliminate a controversial House provision requiring advance FBI loyalty checks of all foundation employes and scholarship applicants.

Onion Price Margin Assailed

By The Associated Press

Representative Gross (R., Iowa) yesterday told the House he wanted to give its members a "quick smell of the onion situation."

His version:

Housewives in the Capital "are being scalped" to the tune of two pounds of onions for 15 cents retail. Farmers got as litle as 3 cents for 50 pounds.

Some Iowa producers have been dumping onions in their fields rather then sell them for 44 to 60 cents a 50-pound bag, less 25 cents a bag to ship them to Chicago markets and 16 cents for the bag itself.

Onions of the same grade sold here at the same time for $1.50 a 50-pound bag wholesale and 2 pounds for 15 cents or $3.75 a 50-pound bag retail.

Gross said "this appears to substantiate" charges he said were made by the Michigan Onion Growers' Association and relayed to him by the Iowa Vegetable Growers' Association These were, he said, that onion farmers are the "victims of one of the most flagrant cases of manipulation in the recent history of any commodity on any exchange."

Gross said statements by the Michigan and Iowa groups include:

While 85,000 cars were traded in 1949 on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, only 2500 cars actually were delivered.

While the exchange was doing a billion-dollar business in onions in 1949, onion farmers were losing millions of dollars even with a short crop.

The exchange employed practices of "hedging, short-selling and scalping" to drive down the price of onions from about $5 a bag to 44 cents.

Chiang Calls Soviet Active in Civil War

Taipei, Formosa, April 5 (AP).—The Nationalists today asserted Russia was pouring planes and pilots into Red China and ordered the charges laid before the United Nations.

Foreign Minister George Yeh made the charges in a formal statement. He made no reference to earlier Nationalist assertions that Russian planes with Russian pilots shot down two Nationalist fighters Sunday over Hangchow Bay south of Shanghai.

Yeh declared "Soviet fliers and aircraft technicians, both military and civilian, have been arrivng in increasing numbers at various cities in north and central China.

"A large part of former Japanese planes and some former United State Lend-Lease aircraft for Soviet Russia are now definitely in use by the Chinese Communists," he added.

(Associated Press Correspondent Fred Hampson in Hongkong said in a separate dispatch that "there seems no longer any question that hundreds of Russians have reached Shanghai in the last month or so, possibly 6000."

(Hampson based his estimate on reports from persons arriving from Shanghai. The arrivals said Russian airmen had joined the Chinese Communist air force "but so far this correspondent has been unable to find anyone who actually saw Russian pilots board planes.")

Yeh said Russian technicians are setting up and maintaining an air force signal corps for the Chinese Communists.

He said the Nationalist representative at the United Nations had been directed to place the information before the body. The Nationalists will renew a request that the U. N. send observers to China.

Painting of Scalping Removed at Capitol

By The Associated Press

An Oklahoma Seminole, who objected recently to a picture hanging on the wall of a House committee room because it showed an Indian scalping a white man, apparently has won his fight to have it removed.

Chairman Peterson (D., Fla.), whose committee handles Indian affairs, told a reporter yesterday: "I had the picture taken down yesterday. It is in the back room. I don't know what will be done with it finally, but it is a valuable picture and should not be destroyed."

Knowland Assails Lie For Stand on China

By the United Press

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) said last night that Trygve Lie, Secretary-General of the United Nations, has become an "obvious partisan" of Russia and should be replaced when his term expires.

In a speech prepared for Senate delivery, Knowland also said Lie has become an "open enemy" of the Nationalist government in China, a "partisan" of the Chinese Communists and that the United States "to a considerable extent" has lost confidence in him.

Knowland blasted Lie for what he termed efforts to unseat the anti-Communist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at the U. N.

District Beauties Off to Entertain Soldiers Of MDW on 'Guinea Pig' Duty in Cold Arctic

ENTERTAIN IN FAR NORTH—These five girls will be wrapped in fur parkas for their Easter parade. All five are among a group of professional entertainers who have volunteered services to perform for soldiers at the Military District of Washington Arctic testing station in the Far North. At rehearsal (standing, from left), Diane Jayson, Doris Cumberland and Mildred Harvey, Naomi Roberts (seated, left) and Nina Baker

The Military District of Washington is a versatile outfit—it even helps operate a Far North outpost.

Everyone knows the MDW is the uniformed show-horse of ceremonial Washington and its M. P.'s capably handle overzealous soldiers about town.

But yesterday, in a routine press release with photographs of scantily dressed gals, MDW inadvertently took the lid off its assignment thousands of miles north in the cold wilderness of Canada.

For the Department of Defense, MDW is operating a joint United States-Canadian Arctic testing station in, what the release described only as "the Far North."

News peg for MDW's previously undisclosed duty was an announcement that 17 "beauties and comedians from Washington's entertainment world" departed yesterday for the outpost to "bring an early thaw" to the "(ice)-solated" troops, some from the Washington area.

Further inquiry revealed the Military District of Washington has been administering the United States' phase of the northern testing station for more than two years.

MDW apparently fell heir to the assignment because it operates directly under the Pentagon command, and is in close touch with technical service headquarters.

The station is understood to be located in Churchill on the southwestern shore of the Hudson Bay. The Army is testing there under Arctic conditions all types of equipment — ordnance, clothing, fuel and foods.

Most of the work there is under wraps. Many of the MDW troops assigned to the outpost are serving as guinea pigs in the testing work.

The troupe, bound by air for the northern testing station, includes Lorraine DeBoe, voted Washington's Miss Television of 1949. It was organized by Milton Harvey, and has volunteered its entertainment services without pay. The entertainers are scheduled to stage shows nightly from today through Sunday.

Joliot-Curie Denies U. S. H-Bomb Lead

Paris, April 5 (U.P.).—Frederic Joliot-Curie, France's Communist atomic energy commissioner, said today the United States is certainly not ahead of Russia in work on the hydrogen bomb.

Joliot-Curie made his statement at the annual conference of the French Communist Party.

Russian atomic scientists are working with enthusiasm "because they know that their government has proposed to other governments the constitution of an international organism for the control of atomic energy," Joliot-Curie said.

"They know that if they were attacked they would be able to attack in return," he continued. "They do not fear the blackmail of the H-bomb because the United States is certainly not ahead of Russia in this domain."

However, Joliot-Curie added, "we Communists know" the Soviet Union will never use atomic weapons first.

Victory in a new war would not necessarily go to the country which first used atomic weapons, Joliot-Curie said. But he said atomic and hydrogen bombs presented "a terrible danger which all of us must unite to avoid."

"The next war would cause tens of millions of deaths and immense material destruction," he said.

The conference sent a message to Premier Josef Stalin saying the liberation of France by Western Allied troops was primarily due to the Russian people and the Russian army—which never put foot on French soil.

Labor Wins Election, Has Majority of 4 Again

Sheffield, England, April 5 (AP).—The British Labor government boosted its over-all majority in Commons to four tonight by winning a special parliamentary election in the Neepsend division of this city.

Sir Frank Soskice, Britain's solicitor general, polled 22,080 votes in a sure Labor constituency. The candidate of the combined Liberals and Conservatives, James P. Hunt, could roll up only 8365. The Communist candidate, E. L. Moore, got 729.

Czechs Sentence 10 Priests, One to Life Imprisonment

Prague, April 5 (AP).—The Prague State Court sentenced one Roman Catholic clergyman to life imprisonment and nine others to lesser terms today on charges of treason, spying for the Vatican and plotting an armed revolt against the Communist government.

Dr. Jan Mastilak, 39, director of a Moravian theological institute, drew the top sentence in this first mass trial of Catholic priests in Czechoslovakia since the Communist coup in 1948.

The five-judge tribunal sentenced the others—including two abbots and a Jesuit provincial—to terms ranging from 2 to 25 years. In addition, most of the defendants were fined and deprived of citizenship rights for 10 years. Mastilak and two others appealed.

The official Czech news agency announced the verdicts. Western newsmen were unable to gain admittance to the hearing, which opened Friday without advance notice. They were told either tickets were not available or there was not enough room in the court.

By the news agency's accounts, Mastilak pleaded partly guilty Saturday and "described all his activities in an innocent light, much more innocent than his previous (pre-trial) statements indicate." Four codefendants were reported to have pleaded guilty, two partly guilty and three innocent.

Angus Ward Granted Promotion, Pay Raise

Angus Ward, former United States Consul General in Mukden, Manchuria, who was imprisoned by Chinese Communists a few months ago, was promoted by President Truman yesterday from a class 2 to a class 1 foreign service officer.

The promotion lifts him from a salary classification of from $10,000 to $11,900 to a classification of from $12,000 to $13,500. At present Ward is awaiting reassignment to another post.

Six Citizens Of 3000 B. C. Are Unearthed

Helwan, Egypt, April 5 (U.P.).—Slowly and with infinite care skilled Egyptian workmen today uncovered the well-preserved bodies of four men and two women buried for at least 5000 years.

King Farouk financed the excavation, in which workers specially selected for their delicate touch used shaving brushes to clear the last grains of sand from the coffins of grass.

Young Archaeologist Zaki Saad headed the expedition which found the burial site dating from the First Dynasty, in this suburban town 15 miles south of Cairo.

The old, dry grass disintegrated at the slightest touch as the coffins were removed and the bodies began to be visible for the first time since approximately 3000 B. C.

The first body uncovered was that of a woman. As the grass was painstakingly cleared away her head still showed locks of hair. The skull and teeth were well preserved and there was a distinct feminine contour to the rest of the body.

She had been buried on her left side, facing west, with her head to the south. Her knees were pulled up to the breast. One hand was under her left cheek, the other rested on her chin, a method peculiar to the First Dynasty.

Zaki Saad said it was customary to bury the dead in the position of an embryo to prepare them for rebirth to eternal life.

Jars and skillfully worked small alabaster vessels and necklaces of colored stones lay under the body. There was no indication of her name.

One of the male bodies showed clear signs of having had a leg fracture. The bone was removed carefully for examination by medical experts.

Discovery of St. Peter's Tomb To Be Announced Soon by Pope

Vatican City, April 5 (U.P.)—Pope Pius XII plans to announce next month the discovery here of the tomb of Saint Peter, a usually well-informed Vatican source said today.

The source said the tomb has been found in an ancient underground chapel beneath Saint Peter's Basilica, where excavations have been carried out for more than 10 years.

The pontiff, according to this source, will make his announcement in mid-May during inauguration of the underground basilica. This will be simultaneous with five Holy Year canonizations in which the church will elevate five persons to sainthood, the informant said.

"Announcement and verification of the discovery will cast new glory on Rome and silence critics, some of whom claim that Saint Peter had never been to Rome," the Vatican source added.

Ceremony to Be Broadcast

The ceremony at which the Pope will officiate, the informant said, will be broadcast to all the world from the underground basilica and Saint Peter's tomb. He said arrangements were expected to be made to enable the faithful to visit the new holy spot afterward and pray there.

The underground basilica, 33 feet below the floor of Saint Peter's Church, is expected to be flooded with visitors during the latter part of the 1950 Holy Year. It can accommodate about 10,000 persons.

According to a high Vatican source, the Pope will invite scholars and archeologists of all religions and nationalities to view the evidence on which the Catholic Church bases its affirmation that the tomb is really that of Saint Peter, and the spot where he was crucified and buried in 67 A. D.

Evidence Prepared in Book

The evidence, now kept a close secret, will be released in a scholarly book written by five authorities who had charge of the excavations, the source said.

He said it included inscriptions in Greek and Latin found in the catacombs of Saint Sebastian on the ancient Appean Way, three miles south of Rome.

According to Catholic research, Saint Peter was crucified at the Circus of Nero next to a pagan cemetery. The early Christians, in the custom of honoring a martyr, buried him on the spot.

Pro-Leopold Van Zeeland Tries Cabinet

Brussels, April 5 (AP).—Social Christians advocating the return of exiled King Leopold III obtained the appointment of one of his most ardent supporters, Paul van Zeeland, as Premier-designate today.

Regent Prince Charles, Leopold's brother, handed Van Zeeland the assignment which Liberal Leader Albert Deveze gave up yesterday after nine days of effort to form a government.

Van Zeeland, a former Premier, started talks right away. He tried to get hesitating Liberals to help the Social Christians form a government that would take the responsibility of convening Parliament to invite Leopold to resume the throne.

After those consultations, Van Zeeland is expected to form an all Social Christian government. In a joint session of Parliament, the Social Christians would have a majority estimated at seven votes.

A rumor that Leopold might be considering abdicating after Van Zeeland brings him back spread in Brussels today. But a member of the King's staff telephoned from Switzerland to deny it.

Socialists led by former Premier Paul-Henri Spaak are the most vocal opponents of the King, whose surrender to the Germans in 1940 is still a matter of controversy.

Acheson Hints Posts for GOP

William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), one of the bitterest critics of State Department policies in China and one of the few who voted against Acheson's confirmation as Secretary.

Acheson said yesterday that he was giving serious thought to Knowland's proposal to send surplus American food into Communist China as famine relief. There have been persistent reports, mainly from Hongkong, of famine conditions developing on the Communist-held mainland of China.

Acheson said some reports told of food being moved from Manchuria, not a famine area, into Soviet Siberia.

The question of relief for Communist China, he explained, involved many difficult choices, such as whether the United States Government should oppose, acquiesce in or encourage the efforts of private organizations here to ship food into Communist territory.

The strongest argument in favor of sending the food, he said, was the humanitarian desire to help suffering people in China. Against it was the difficulty of being sure that food shipments would reach the people who needed them.

On other subjects the Secretary said:

1. He plans to stop at Paris for talks with Foreign Minister Robert Schuman before going to London for the meeting of the North Atlantic Council, now scheduled for about May 15;

(2) He strongly favors the west German republic accepting the invitation to join the Council of Europe;

3. He wants American ambassadors in the field to have ample scope for their own initiative, as if they were theater commanders in war; the recent letter of Ambassador Henry F. Grady to the Greek government was Grady's own, but had full State Department approval; and

4. The State Department is considering a reduction in the size of its embassy staffs in eastern Europe because of the increasing difficulty of doing normal official business there.

Peron's Hope for Aid Boosted by Acheson

Secretary Acheson gave an official boost yesterday to Argentine hopes of indirect loans from the United States Government.

The Secretary told his press conference he was encouraged by steps recently taken by the Peron government—meaning, presumably, the settlement of long-standing grievances of American business firms in Argentina.

He said very considerable progress was being made, judging from a talk he had a few days ago with Ramon Cereijo, Peron's Minister of the Treasury. Acheson thought relations between the two countries had been put on a much sounder basis of mutual advantage, and said the United States was anxious to play its part in that development.

Asked about the prospect of American loans to Argentina, the Secretary said it would be an entirely normal outcome of recent actions on both sides if loans should eventuate.

The Argentines are seeking American Government help in lending to American exporters to whom the Peron government owes an estimated 109 million dollars.

Part of Main Heart Artery Transplanted

Detroit, April 5 (AP).—A 57-year-old man was "doing well" today after surgeons transplanted into his chest a 6-inch-long segment of a dead man's main heart artery.

Dr. Lam

The patient had an advanced thoracic aneurism, a condition in which the walls of the main artery were diseased and giving way before direct pressure from the heart. Henry Ford Hospital doctors said if the ballooning artery, which already was distended to the size of a small grapefruit, had burst death would have followed immediately.

The rare operation, performed by Drs. Conrad Lam and H. H. Aram, was not the first of its kind, but it may herald new advances in operations on blood vessels.

The segment of healthy artery transplanted to replace the patient's diseased aorta was taken five days earlier from the body of a deceased person. It was preserved under refrigeration in penicillin and blood plasma before it was spliced into the living man's artery at a point just two inches from his heart.

Drug Aids Child Victim Of Leukemia

Little Gerald Funk, 16-month-old leukemia victim flown here for treatment, yesterday was released from Georgetown Hospital, hale, pain-free and happy.

Gerald

He had been treated with cortisone, the new miracle drug whose potentialities are still undetermined. The treatment was credited by his doctors with a "complete remission"—not a cure—of the disease.

"Gerry" may suffer a relapse, a return of the so-called blood cancer, in two or three months, his doctors said yesterday. Other, older children with leukemia have had the same dramatic recovery with cortisone, only to sicken again.

The now smiling boy will stay here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Funk, of Fort Bayard, N. Mex., and his five-year-old sister, Joyce, at the home of their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wilhelm, of 2705 Plyers Mill rd., Silver Spring, Md. He will return periodically to the hospital for bone marrow and blood tests.

"Gerry" was flown to Washington from New Mexico on March 16. Suffering intermitten fevers, he was so listless he seemed more sleeping than awake, his father said. A large abscess had formed on his hip, and he cried at the slightest touch.

When the boy left the hospital yesterday, his disposition was completely changed, his doctor said. His appetite was back to pre-sickness normal; he was happy and apparently full of life.

The big question, of course, is just how long "Gerry" will remain free of the death-dealing ravages of leukemia, and whether or not any future injections of the new drug will have the same "remissive" effect.

From other medical centers where cortisone has been used against leukemia, doctors said, reports as yet unpublished show that the disease does return within three months. Some patients have been started on second treatments, but so recently the results are not yet known.

Doctors told his parents before his admission to Georgetown Hospital that if he went untreated he might die within three weeks.

D. C. Red Cross Drive Reaches 93 Pct. of Quota

The 1950 Red Cross drive in Washington has reached 93.07 percent of its $1,390,000 goal, General Campaign Chairman Daniel W. Bell announced yesterday.

The percentage, Bell said, represents gifts of $967,033.78.

At the same time, Campaign Director Randolph G. Bishop asserted that the Red Cross in Washington "has a fighting chance of reaching the goal by the next report meeting, April 11, if all workers follow through on their assignments."

C. H. Johnson, chairman of the general business division, urged firms to call EXecutive 7383 when they have collected their contributions.

Senate Passes Kilgore DP Bill

cent of the displaced persons be of Baltic origin.

A provision that the Immigration Service and the American Foreign Service could overrule the Displaced Persons Commission was defeated, 24-47.

Date Line is Altered

The date line for determining the eligibity of displaced persons was moved from December 22, 1945, of the present law to January 1, 1949.

Several attempts to tie the admission of DPs to unemployment figures in this country were defeated. The first made by McCarran would have cut off the admission of DPs if unemployment reached 4 million mark in this country.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) pointed out that current unemployment figures are above that total.

Later McCarran was again defeated on an amendment to tie the admission to the figure of six million unemployed in this country. And Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) was defeated in an attempt to tie the figure to 10 million unemployed.

Subversives Barred

An amendment introduced by Senator William Jenner (R., Ind.) providing that the Displaced Persons Commission close its business within 60 days of the expiration of the law was adopted.

The substitute bill bars "subversives and those who advocate destruction of competitive enterprise and revolutionary overthrow of the government," and requires an oath upon arrival.

President Truman has complained that the present DP law discriminates against Catholics and Jews. Backers of the present law have denied this. The House passed a bill in line with the Truman recommendations last June. The substitute backed by Kilgore and his bipartisan group is essentially the same as the House measure.

Chairman McCarran leading the fight for the committee bill said:

"In all my 17 years in the Senate, I have never encountered such pressure upon one measure. There are sworn statements that one million dollars has been spent lobbyin on this, and nobody knows how much more."

Senators Myers (D., Pa.), one of the sponsors of the substitute measure, said its approval would "assure the rest of the world that America plans to fullfill its international commitments."

Senator Jenner (R., Ind.), however, backed the committee bill. He said that under existing law the United States is letting in a lot of "storm troopers, communistic spies, defrauders and perjurers."

McCarran insisted that the admission of additional DPs would add to unemployment problems. "How many will be hungry a few months from now because they can't find employment?" he asked.

Contempt Terms Of Reds' Lawyers Upheld on Appeal

New York, April 5 (U.P.).—The United States Court of Appeals today upheld in a two-to-one decision the contempt sentences against the five attorneys for the 11 convicted United States Communist leaders and Eugene Dennis, who served as his own counsel.

Federal Judge Harold R. Medina levied the jail terms, ranging from 30 days to six months, against the six men at the close of the marathon nine-month Communist conspiracy trial.

United States Attorney Irving Saypol indicated that the attorneys might be allowed to go free until they argue the appeals of their clients or until they appeal their own convictions to the United States Supreme Court.

Story Believed

Bednasek Acquitted in Coed's Death

Iowa City, Iowa, April 5 (AP).—Robert E. Bednasek was acquitted today of the charge he murdered Margaret Anne (Gee-Gee) Jackson, 20, because she didn't love him any more.

Bednasek

A jury of four women and eight men found the 24-year-old University of Iowa senior innocent of any crime.

The State charged he strangled the blonde coed during a rendezvous in the "Empty Arms," men's rooming house, last December 11.

One of the jurors said the "turning point" was Bednasek's own "truth serum" story that the coed's death was "a tragic, horrible accident." He said the jury didn't even consider the State's request that Bednasek pay on the gallows as "a cold-blooded murderer."

Only human hands pressing with "great force," said the State, could have caused the throat injuries which brought death to Margaret Jackson. Earlier that fatal night, after dining on seafood and wine at the "Empty Arms," the couple had gone to a winter formal party. Afterward they returned to the rooming house for a nightcap.

Bednasek told the jury "truth serum" treatments he took just before the trial broke down a mental block and enabled him to remember details of Gee-Gee's death.

He said they were preparing to leave the room when they paused to speak again of love and to kiss. Then they playfully put their hands on each other's throat. She broke his grip. They danced a few steps. She gasped, moaned and fell. Her head struck a chair as she slumped to the floor. He tried to revive her and then ran to the police for help.

It was this version which the jury, by its verdict, accepted.

Conferees Complete Omnibus Housing Bill

By the United Press

House and Senate conferees reached a final agreement last night on a new omnibus housing bill lacking the Administration's controversial cooperative housing feature.

Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee, said he intends to seek approval of the compromise today before House members leave for their Easter recess. Quick Senate action also is expected.

The final agreement came after an all-day session that centered in a battle for funds to allow the Federal National Mortgage Association to buy home mortgages.

The conferees agreed to give FNMA 250 million dollars. The Senate voted no money, but the House provided 750 million dollars for FNMA.

One trouble spot was removed by eliminating a provision, temporarily agreed to Tuesday, which would have earmarked 25 million dollars of this sum for prefabricating housing loans.

It was feared the provision might be ruled out of order because neither the House nor Senate had provided any funds for prefabricated housing. Instead, the conferees agreed that $12,500,000, which the Reconstruction Finance Corp., has left from a 50-million-dollar housing fund, might be used for prefabricated housing loans.

Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee said there would be no parliamentary question over this use of the RFC money.

The final agreement included a provision that 43,000 units of housing built during the war could be turned over to local communities, on their request, for low cost housing projects.

The House had provided that this housing must be offered for sale by the Government within six months, but the Senate feared this might turn veterans out of their homes with no place to go. Under the compromise the local communities could let the veterans remain if they wished.

Another agreement fixed the maximum interest rate at about 2.55 percent for 300 million dollars in long-range loans to educational institutions for student and faculty housing. The House put the maximum at 4.5 percent. The Senate top was 2.5 percent.

The conferees also accepted the Senate provision for Government insurance of loans to housing cooperatives under the present Federal Housing Administration. The Senate restricted such loans to five million dollars for a single project. The House had set a three-million-dollar figure.

The Government would insure up to 95 percent of the loans if 65 percent of the co-op members were veterans. Otherwise, the insurance would cover only 90 percent.

Both Houses had knocked out the Administration's plan to set up a new corporation to make direct loans to housing co-ops.

Forget 'Isms,' Silver Spring Board Told

Americans must resell the things about their country that have been good to them, Silver Spring Board of Trade members were told last night.

"Let us do this," said Fred A. Palmer, radio consultant for WOL and last night's guest speaker, "and not worry about the 'isms' of foreign countries.

"If we tell our young people of today what has been good for us, that is the answer to our present problem."

Einar B. Christensen, Board of Trade president, announced the appointment of Richard Heinike as the new secretary to replace Edward De Nicke, who resigned when he moved to Silver Spring.

The membership indorsed the current proposal by the Silver Spring Memorial Association asking the Montgomery County Council to float a one-million-dollar bond issue for construction of a Silver Spring Memorial Hospital.

$29,000 Price Set by Sesqui For Theater

The Sesquicentennial Commission's executive committee agreed yesterday to put up an additional $29,000 to pay for the Rock Creek amphitheater.

The additional amount, running the total cost to about $564,000, was necessary because of an error in a bid on the main construction job. The contract was then awarded by the Interior Department's National Capitol Parks to the second highest bidder after a ruling that the low man could withdraw.

Freedom Fair plans are still up in the air pending a ruling from Attorney General McGrath on the legality of a proposed corporation to run that show next year. The ruling, expected some time ago, now may be ready next week, it was understood yesterday.

Survey Fund For Highway To Be Asked

Fairfax County Supervisors yesterday agreed to ask State funds for a survey which may pave the way for the first link in the long-planned Monticello Highway, connecting Washington and Charlottesville.

At the request of Rufus G. Coldwell of Fairfax, chairman of a committee which first advanced the highway proposal more than two years ago, the board agreed to draft a resolution asking a survey fund of $10,000 from the State Highway Department. The survey would affect only that section of the road proposed for Fairfax and Prince William counties.

A request for similar action will go to Prince William supervisors at their meeting today, Coldwell said.

Plans for the highway drafted by Coldwell's committee provide that it would utilize exiting roadways from Manassas, in Prince William County, to Charlottesville. An entirely new link, however, would be required from Manassas eastward to a point connecting with the Shirley Highway near the District. It is for the new link, Coldwell said, that the survey fund is sought.

The entire highway project already has been approved by the State Highway Department, but has been listed among "future" developments. Its terminals would be the Jefferson Memorial here, and Monticello, Jefferson's plantation home at Charlottesville.

UMW Welfare Fund to Resume $100 Pension Payments Soon

Pensions of $100 a month and other benefits will be resumed shortly by the United Mine Workers Welfare Fund, it was announced yesterday.

The fund, which suspended the pensions and other payments last September, will be "reactivated" as soon as the necessary forms and instructions can be drawn up, it was disclosed by Miss Josephine Roche, director of the 1947 fund and neutral trustee of the 1950 funds, after a meeting of fund trustees yesterday.

The trustees of the 1947 fund—John L. Lewis and Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), turned over 25 million dollars in left-over receipts to the trustees of the 1950 fund—Lewis, Miss Roche and Charles A. Owen.

Lewis represents the union. Miss Roche, a friend of the UMW leader, succeeds Bridges as neutral trustee. Owen, who heads the Imperial Coal Co., is the mine operators' representative on the new board, succeeding former Judge Charles Dawson, whom Lewis refused to recognize.

The old board of trustees was dissolved yesterday, and the new board immediately held its first meeting and made preparations for reopening the fund, suspended September 17 when the $100-million-a-year tonnage royalties ran out.

GIANT knows that the most important points about an egg are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms, thus making it possible for us to bring you eggs of "top" quality in their freshest condition.
An egg's quality is related to the breeding, care, and scientific feeding of the chickens. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers who are exclusively egg producers and whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production. There's a great difference between eggs produced by chickens which roam the farm picking up "scratch" here and there—and eggs produced by chickens fed with scientific mash (grain and bran) and other fattening foods including a daily ration of buttermilk and even cod liver oil. It's eggs of this latter kind of chickens which GIANT features in every one of its 20 stores.

Indonesian Rebels Take City in Coup

Jakarta, Java, U. S. I., April 5 (AP). — Rebellious Indonesian soldiers captured Makassar, Celebes seaport and state capital of East Indonesia, in 45 minutes of shooting today.

A cryptic communique from the federal government's Information Ministry said tonight the insurgents have been ordered to return to their garrisons and the leader was summoned to Jakarta to answer for the uprising. The communique did not specify how the orders were transmitted and did not say the revolt was settled.

The uprising—in which 10 persons were killed or wounded—was the third in three months involving Indonesian soldiers who fought in the Dutch army against the Indonesian nationalists' successful bid for independence.

Only a few hours before the Makassar outbreak, the federal government arrested Sultan Hamid II, one of the government ministers. He was accused of masterminding the west Java revolt at Bandoeng last January led by a former Dutch army captain, R. P. P. (Turk) Westerling.

The 37-year-old Sultan, president of West Borneo, was accused of directing plots against the government while sitting in inner circles. Officials said he probably will be tried for treason.

Only last week a serious revolt of Indonesian soldiers still serving in the Dutch army on the island of Ambon was quelled after two days. Details of that uprising have not been published.

The leader of the Makassar rebellion was a 26-year-old native of the Celebes, Capt. Andi Abdul Aziz, who trained with Westerling as a parachute trooper.

A company of about 150 men led by Captain Aziz had just been transferred into the U.S.I. army when it turned on its new commanders. The rebels attacked 100 federal troops in their barracks. After 45 minutes of sporadic machine-gun fire, the federal soldiers were disarmed.

The rebel units quickly seized the harbor, radio station, telegraph office and began patrolling the city.

U. S. Chamber, NAM Oppose Changing Labor Board Setup

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers yesterday urged Congress to reject President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 12.

The plan would abolish the autonomous office of General Counsel to the National Labor Relations Board and transfer its powers to the five-man board.

The General Counsel was established in an independent position under terms of the Taft-Hartley management-labor relations act to prosecute violations of the law; the board was set up to try the cases presented by the General Counsel.

The stand of the two great employer organizations was presented to the Senate Committee on Expenditures in Executive Department by Hoyt P. Steele, vice president of the Benjamin Electric Co., Des Plaines, Ill., speaking for the Chamber; and Lambert H. Miller, counsel for the NAM.

The President's reorganization proposal goes beyond the Hoover Report recommendations, and would result in neither economy or efficiency, Steele said.

Miller charged the plan would undermine the "public confidence" in the NLRB "which has resulted from the separation of the board prosecuting and judicial functions."

Rejection of the plan was also urged by James D. Marshall, representing the Associated General Contractors, and Alex E. Wilson, an Atlanta attorney.

Hearings will continue today in the Senate Office Building, beginning at 10 a. m.

Bulgaria Reports Farming Troubles

Belgrade, April 5 (NYHT).—Failures of a "disastrous" nature in the agricultural program of the Communist regime of Bulgaria for the spring of 1950 have been officially reported from Sofia in recent weeks.

Local committees of the Communist Party in many districts throughout the country failed in the spring sowing "campaign," according to the Bulgarian Communist press, because they did not carry out the instructions of Vulko Chervenkov, the nation's strongly pro-Soviet Communist Premier.

An intensive campaign was reportedly urged by Chervenkov to complete mechanized spring sowing by March 8. However, it was later reported that the State tractor stations fulfilled on time only 15 percent of the scheduled plowing and 10 percent of the sowing.

Some stations were said late last month to be making belated efforts to fulfill the plan but others were reported to be "still lagging disgracefully behind."

In Plovdiv in central Bulgaria, second largest city in the country, the Communist district was said to have shown "open opposition" to the mechanization of agriculture. It did not bother to reply to requests for cooperation from the director of the Plovdiv tractor station.

In Pleven in northern Bulgaria, the sixth largest town, the deputy director of the collective farms was said to have "disorganized them by his habitual drunkenness."

These reports followed extensive purges in almost every department of the Communist regime in the last six months. The purged officials were accused of anti-Soviet activities, sabotage or incompetence.

The tally today showed that the total of top-level Communists purged since September is more than 40, including several ministers, numerous deputy ministers, at least three army chiefs, more than a dozen members of the Communist Central Committee, and directors of various state enterprises.

$13,500,000 Expansion Set at Soldiers' Home

date all VA activities. The VA got two sectors, of 44 and 39 acres each for the hospital and office buildings, respectively.

4. Just who is to build the two, 200-foot roadways through the reservation in North Central Washington was still undisclosed yesterday. District highway engineers said they had not been consulted on the matter.

5. Soldiers domiciled at the Home, vehemently protesting what they termed "a brazen land grab," are scheduled to meet in mass protest at the Home's Stanley Hall, Saturday, to word a protest resolution to Congress.

First Sergt. Jason B. Chambers, 74, a spokesman for the soldiers, numbering more than 1500, said speakers at the meeting will trace "how this scheme started in September, 1948, when the Budget Bureau enlisted many organizations under its banner for a bigger band of 40 thieves."

Freeze Lifted

Colonel Cordiner, the Home's deputy governor, revealed the lifting of the building freeze for expansion and improvement of Soldiers' Home. For the past several years, he explained, the Budget Bureau repeatedly denied the Home's request to use part of its own 30 million dollar surplus to expand.

Under the negotiation agreement, Colonel Cordiner said, the Budget Bureau has agreed to recommend that Congress approve plans to build a new domiciliary building of 150 beds, and a 200-bed addition to the Home's present 330-bed hospital. He said he could not estmate the cost but other sources placed it at $13,500,000, including improvements.

Colonel Cordiner said there is a waiting list now of 430 men eligible to enter Soldiers' Home. By normal attrition rates, he explained, each applicant must now wait from 8 to 10 months.

The land lopped off by agreement of the Army, GSA, VA and the Budget Bureau has been used chiefly for farming, dairy operations and poultry raising for the Home. These activities will probably be discontinued, he said.

Acceptance Requested

Members of the Washington Medical Center, Inc., voted to request immediate acceptance action of the boards of Garfield, Emergency and Episcopal Hospitals, who are to merge their facilities under the proposed medical center.

Advantages of the Soldiers' Home site over lands sought from the Naval Observatory here are many, they said. Chief of these, they pointed out, is that the new medical center may open two to three years earlier.

VA Administrator Gray's action in declaring the Nevius Tract surplus was taken in the face of a bill now before Congress which would order VA to sell the land to private ownership if it is not used for a hospital site.

Others Express Need

In officially turning it over to GSA, General Gray pointed out that other Federal agencies, such as the National park and Planning Commission and the Army department had expressed need of the land. Among other uses, it has been suggested as an addition to Arlington National Cemetery, which it adjoins.

VA originally bought the Nevius land at a court-set price of 1.6 million dollars for its 25 acres then abandoned initial plans to construct a veterans hospital there.

With test borings to be started soon at the new site for a 500-bed vets hospital on Soldiers' Home grounds, VA spokesmen said actual construction may be started early next year. Tentative plans now call for the opening of bids on a conventional-type, 500-bed structure there in December, they said.

Hospital Cuts Win Praise For Johnson

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report yesterday indorsed the Department of Defense's hospital cutback program and praised Defense Secretary Louis Johnson for his "imagination and courage" in handling the problem.

Committee Chairman Robert L. Johnson declared the program "will not alter the highly competent professional medical services available to military personnel or beneficiaries."

"Secretary Johnson merits high praise for the vigorous and forthright manner in which he has attacked the problem of improved government in his department," said Johnson.

Terming the plan to close or convert to other use 18 military hospitals, "a logical next step" in the planned management program of the Hoover Commission, the committee head said it would abolish "8000 unneeded beds."

"More importantly," Johnson went on, "it helps to alleviate the acute shortage of physicians."

He declared the Department of Defense is discussing with the Veterans Administration the use of some of the hospitals slated for closing for veterans' care.

Johnson also praised the United Medical and Hospitalization bill which would merge existing Federal hospital services, including the military and veterans, into a single Medical Administration.

U. S. Held Urging British to Center A-Work on Engines

American officials were reported yesterday to be urging Britain to concentrate its atomic projects on turning out nuclear engines, leaving bomb-making to the United States.

The British Ministry of Supply disclosed Tuesday that construction will begin soon on Britain's third atomic works. A spokesman said it will be a huge enterprise, requiring several years to build.

While there was no public indication this project would be concerned with developing nuclear engines, congressional sources pointed out that a similar length of time is being required to build reactors in Idaho aimed at producing atomic power plants for submarines and airplanes.

Engel Saw Saucer Over Michigan, He Advises Scoffers

By the United Press

Two Congressmen, both of whom should know something about it, disagreed yesterday on whether there is such a thing as a flying saucer.

Representative George D. Mahon (D., Tex.) said, "No." Representative Albert J. Engel (R., Mich.) said maybe not, but he saw one.

The two Congressmen are members of the House Military Appropriations subcommittee, which has a finger on all defense spending.

Mahon, chairman of the subcommittee, was confident his group would know if there was anything to "this flying saucer business."

Engel, however, said he saw a flying disc in the neighborhood of Elsie, Mich., at about 1 p. m., one day last summer.

Engel said several other citizens, all of them sober and well thought of, saw it too. He said two of them chased the object in a plane but it was too high and too fast and got away.

Armed Forces Housing Voted

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill under which the armed services would draw up plans for housing at or near crowded military bases.

The measure is an amendment to the Wherry Housing Act passed by Congress last year. Under that law private contractors submit plans and bids for apartment projects they want to build at military bases.

The building program has been stalled since last December because the services found it too hard to compare bids by various contractors on plans having no relation to each other.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson had asked Speaker Sam Rayburn to speed action on the new method, under which the armed services would draw up the plans and then solicit bids for the work.

Passage was by unanimous consent.

Transit Rate Hearing Recessed

ment costs, accrued depreciation not allowed by PUC in previous hearings and a $5,250,000 item claimed by the company—and previously denied by PUC—in an 1895 land deal.

In the course of his testimony, Heberle said a 10-percent rate of return was necessary to "maintain financial integrity, credit and attract capital," but the firm was not requesting this amount.

Heberle said the recent increase in Maryland fares from 5 to 7 cents a zone has resulted in a 13 to 15 percent loss in passengers and predicted a 6 percent drop in Washington if the rate hikes are adopted.

The CTC official said the 15-cent cash rate is now in effect in Chicago and Boston and has been asked for in Baltimore.

A brief flurry arose over how long to recess the hearing. People's Counsel John O'Dea and Herbert P. Leeman, president, Federation of Citizens Associations, asked for a month and Lloyd Harrison, the PUC counsel, preferred two weeks. The company opposed both, declaring a week was ample to prepare cross-examination. The commission decided on three weeks.

U. S. Woman Sentenced As Smuggler in Greece

Athens, April 5 (AP).—Greek authorities announced today they have sentenced an American woman to 13 months in prison and fined her the equivalent of $10,000 on charges of trying to smuggle nylon stockings into Greece.

They said Martha Loulakas, 25, of Chicago, was sentenced and fined for trying to get nearly 1000 pairs of nylons through customs at Hassani Airport. She has appealed.

Sabath, 84, Holds 43-Year Record Of House Service

By The Associated Press

In 1881, a small immigrant boy from Little Bohemia landed in Baltimore. His main assets were his courage, his fervent hope that America would be a land of opportunity, and $2.65 in cash.

Rep. Sabath

Yesterday, some 69 years later, Representative Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), celebrated his eighty - fourth birthday.

This twinkly, cigar - puffing little man who looks like an elderly but still lively cupid is dean of the House, heads its rules committee, and holds a record no one else can match.

It was on March 4, 1907, that Sabath first took his seat in the House. Since then the voters in his district, in the heart of Chicago, have sent him back 21 times without a miss, an all time record for electoral faithfulness.

His 43 years add up to the longest period of consecutive service that anyone ever has had either in the House or the Senate.

Wheat Is Threatened By Drought, Insects

effort by Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) to get Federal relief for wheat farmers suffering from a plague of greenbugs. Thomas reported that 50,000 acres of Oklahoma wheat had been virtually destroyed.

This week's weather and crop report of the Weather Bureau reported no relief in the drought area, which it placed as the "southern portion of the Great Plains." Beneficial rains fell in the "dry middle plains," it said, but rain is badly needed in the Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma, central and southwestern Kansas, eastern Colorado and most of New Mexico.

Warmer Weather Needed

"Greenbugs," it added, "have caused considerable damage in most of Texas and Oklahoma." Warmer weather, it said, is needed to stimulate "propagation of parasites to destroy these pests."

The report spoke of abandonment of wheat lands in Texas and Oklahoma. Outside the great wheat-producing States conditions are poor in northwest Missouri because of "prolonged lack of moisture" and in the Ohio Valley "due to excessively wet soil."

From another reliable source, the Santa Fe Railway System, comes this report:

"Winter wheat prospects in the Southwest have shown only one trend since the first of the year, and that is downward.

"Continued absence of moisture is the chief reason but contributing to the rather dismal outlook at present are high winds, greenbugs and other insects.

One-third of Area Affected

"Of a total of approximately 30 million acres of wheat seeded in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and New Mexico last fall, it is estimated that 10 million are being adversely affected by all or part of this unfavorable combination. Considerable acreage already has been lost."

A survey of State agriculture officials in the Great Plains States by The Washington Post brings the following reports:

Frank Hutton, president State Board of Agriculture, Oklahoma: "Dust storms causing damage in isolated areas. Condition of wheat poor due to greenbug damage and lack of rain."

J. E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture, Texas: "Most dust storms have originated in northwest Texas. High winds have kicked up dust and spread over State. Very dry. No relief in sight. No rain in eight months in Panhandle section. Serious condition unless rains come, but nothing like drought in the thirties."

Serious Blowing in Colorado

Paul W. Swisher, Colorado: "The extremely dry winter in most of Colorado has caused some serious blowing and dust storms in some areas. Drought conditions in southeast Colorado is serious. Sunday and Monday snow storms have remedied this situation to some degree. Wheat planting is 15 percent under a year ago. Further reduction in production is expected due to dry winter.

Roy Freeland, Kansas: Only one dust storm of consequence in eastern half of State, with slight damage. Rainfall below normal for the last seven months, topsoil loose.

Cooley Hits Brannan Plan; Once Backed It

Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.), chairman of the House Agricultural Committee, yesterday blasted the Brannan Plan as an untried idea based on a "consumer subsidy." Cooley's attitude was significant because last year he led an unsuccessful fight for the plan in the House.

Cooley, hitherto an Administration stalwart, also criticized President Truman's farm message of Tuesday as a "well calculated" attempt to blame Congress for the potato scandal.

ment of slot machines and the other prohibits interstate transmission of race track and other gambling information.

Twenty-four hours after it was introduced, Johnson yesterday delivered a favorable report on his own committee's investigation to the Senate and announced he will seek $50,000 from the Rules Committee next Wednesday to finance the inquiry. (The rules group has already approved $50,000 for Kefauver's inquiry.)

Johnson referred one of the McGrath bills (banning transmission of gambling data) to a communications subcommittee headed by Senator Ernest W. McFarland (D., Ariz.). Without waiting for rules or Senate clearance, McFarland arranged to open subcommittee hearings on the measure at 10 a. m. Tuesday.

Saying the McGrath bill involves "serious constitutional as well as practical legal questions," McFarland invited Attorney General McGrath and Wayne Coy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission to appear at the initial hearing. He said he will call later representatives of the press services and others directly interested in the transmision of news.

The Kefauver resolution, which antedated Johnson's by three months, meanwhile has defied every effort by the Tennessean to get it to a Senate vote.

Asked for comment on reports that the Administration feared political repercussions from it, Kefauver said he was sure the Judiciary Committee "wouldn't distort an investigation in a political way."

Sen. McCarthy's Sources

Senator McCarthy's solicitude for the welfare of his informants does him great credit. If he were to disclose their identity to the Senate subcommittee investigating his charges of communism in the State Department or to Loyalty Review Board Chairman Seth Richardson who has also asked him for a little assistance, some of them, as he says, might lose their jobs or have their reputations injured among their colleagues. Naturally the Senator would not want to expose anyone to the risk of such injustice.

There used to be a time when anonymous accusations were considered rather cowardly and, indeed, what might be called, without coining a phrase, un-American. In those days, a man was supposed to be willing to stand behind what he said, especially if he attacked the integrity and good faith of a fellow citizen. But in Senator McCarthy's America, the informer appears to be the national ideal; and his reliability seems to be reckoned in direct ratio to his anonymity. Thus Senator McCarthy has short shrift for men willing to appear before the Senate subcommittee and testify under oath respecting their conduct and loyalty. Their very protestations of innocence condemn them. But the man who dons a mask and attacks his associates in secret, whispered slurs appears thereby to give incontestable proof of his patriotism.

Of course, this makes the task of the subcommittee somewhat difficult. There is no way to tell whether the charges recited by Senator McCarthy come from members of the Supreme Court or from secret agents of the Kremlin—or from the village idiot. For that matter, there is no way to tell whether they come from actual living persons at all. And this, as everyone knows, is why no court in the history of the United States has ever permitted anonymous testimony to be presented to a jury.

Bridges' Conviction

Those forces within the Government, which for a dozen years or more have been seeking the downfall of Mr. Harry Bridges, organizer and president of the West Coast longshoreman's union, have now apparently succeeded. On Tuesday in the Federal District Court at San Francisco, Mr. Bridges was convicted on two counts of perjury—for having stated in an application for naturalization that he had never been a member of the Communist Party. The verdict followed one of the noisiest and stormiest trials in the history of American jurisprudence, at which the Government produced a succession of witnesses, themselves former Communists, who testified to his membership in the party, and at which, two of Mr. Bridges' attorneys won themselves jail sentences for contempt.

The allegations concerning Mr. Bridges' affiliation with the Communist Party are of course nothing new. As long ago as 1939 the old Dies Committee demanded the deportation of Mr. Bridges on this ground. Secretary Perkins, however, refused to issue an order, asserting that the evidence of Mr. Bridges' membership in the party was not conclusive, and that even if it were it would be an insufficient reason. Congress, thereupon, passed an amendment to the immigration laws specifically designed to cover the Bridges case.

Thus when the Bureau of Immigration had been transferred from the Department of Labor to that of Justice, the Attorney General, Mr. Biddle, issued the order for deportation on the basis of the amended law. The order, however, was set aside by the Supreme Court in a momentous decision, with Justices Roberts and Frankfurter and Chief Justice Stone dissenting. It was after this victory that Mr. Bridges became an American citizen.

From beginning to end the Bridges case has placed a very severe strain upon traditional American concepts of justice. Of Mr. Bridges' proclivities as a troublemaker there is no doubt whatever and of his Communist associations very little, as the verdict at San Francisco shows. Yet in their eagerness to get rid of him, Mr. Bridges' enemies resorted in the first instance to the dangerous device of an ex post facto law, and in the second to an indictment related only indirectly to the offenses that have made his presence odious to so many Americans. In other words, the Bridges case, like the case of Mr. Alger Hiss, illustrates the tendency of the Government to resort to prosecutions for perjury in political cases where prosecution is impossible under other existing statutes.

Even now that Bridges has been convicted, it is still difficult to see what can be done with him. The verdict undoubtedly will be appealed; but even if the verdict is sustained by the Supreme Court he cannot be deported, for the good reason that Australia, his native country, will refuse to admit him. He can, of course, and probably will, be denaturalized, but that will not end the problem. It will merely make him a man without a country.

German Future

Mr. McCloy has expressed the belief in a speech in London that "Germany wants to join in a united Europe." He goes further and says that "the idea of a European community has a strong hold on the minds of the common people throughout the continent." This shows a faith which was absent a month ago in Secretary Acheson's comment that the people of Europe did not "appear ready for this step." Maybe the activity at Strasbourg (where the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe is now in session) and possession of new data on public opinion in Europe have produced fresh thoughts in the State Department. We believe Mr. McCloy is correct, and, if we didn't, we should think all hope was lost for Europe. There is no alternative to integration for a Europe which since the war has been in process of divestment of its overseas territories and its foreign investments—that is to say, no alternative to being "swallowed in the conqueror's chronicle," as Tennyson puts it.

There is likewise no alternative but to continue to work for a strong link for the whole of the Atlantic community, let alone Europe. This was the aim on both sides of the Atlantic when the Atlantic Pact was signed. Yet publicists in Europe are more and more plugging a new line of disembarrassment—that the European nations should seek somehow to insure a military or security independence of America no less than of Russia. They are urging, in other words, the concept of neutralization of western Europe.

This is different from the position of Mr. Lippmann, who limits his idea of neutralization to Germany. However, in our view, there can be no such distinction. The reason is that Europe and Germany are one and indivisible, for if the problem of Europe is Germany, there cannot be a Europe without Germany. Judging from the attitude of France, there cannot be a Europe without Britain, too. France is terrified over any union with Germany lest she be absorbed, and wants the support of her British neighbor to be sure that any combination will represent a real "unity in diversity."

So the neutralization policy, for Germany or for western Europe as a whole, is no policy at all. On the part of the Europeans, it is a counsel of despair, induced in part by fear of a squeeze between the two atomic-armed powers, in part by a new fear of what is considered the outbreak of irresponsibility in foreign policy-making in Washington, and in part by lack of confidence in their own will-to-resist. It is a sign of the confused times that this policy should be growing in advocacy while the Atlantic Alliance is taking shape.

The truism cannot be too often repeated that what is at stake today is the survival of Western civilization. This is the responsibility of both the New and the Old Worlds. All the nations, Germany included, have a part to play in the struggle—all of them—and the strength of their contributions can be expressed only in unity. It is pretty late in the day to work at it, as Mr. McCloy, referring only to Germany and Europe, implied, for he imparted to his speech a note of urgency. "Tomorrow," he said, "if steps have not been taken to make this idea (a European community) a reality, those hopes may be dashed and support for the program may be dissipated." It is our firm belief that western Germany is still predominately Europe-minded.

Celestial Saucers

Ever since the first great excitement over the flying saucers, we have been spending a good many reassuring words in an effort to explain them away. But they just won't stay explained for more than a week or two running; so that much against our desires and better judgment, we are obliged to acknowledge that the flying saucers are here to stay, that no matter what we may say about them people will keep on discovering them, and that the tales concerning them will grow eerier and more fantastic.

Even so conservative and austere a journal as the United States News and World Report has now aligned itself among the true believers. An article in the current issue tells us that the saucers are a wonderful new type of aircraft devised and employed not by the Martians or Venusians, to be sure, but by our own enterprising Navy, and combining all the more valuable features of the helicopter and jet propulsion. Just to make all this a little more plausible, the Associated Press released the picture of a great cylindrical gadget looking like a monstrously enlarged specimen of cimex lectularius. But, according to the Navy, this was the only one of its kind, and was built experimentally in 1942 and tested for wind resistance and such things at the laboratories of the Naval Advisory Committee for Aeronautics at Langley, Va. For one reason and another no effort was made to fly the thing. Besides, it wasn't supposed to work by jet propulsion, but by two sets of propellers turned by piston engines.

Mr. Henry J. Taylor, a radio commentator with a relatively low boiling point of credulity, has a somewhat similar story. Mr. Taylor believes he has got hold of two of the very tip-top secrets of the national defense, and being a generous sort of fellow, has shared them with his audience. Actually, says Mr. Taylor, there are two kinds of flying saucers—a smaller, or demi-tasse size, only 250 feet in diameter, which requires no pilot and has apparently no particular purpose. It just zips through the heavens for the admiration and confusion of earthly watchers until it disintegrates, which, of course, helps to explain why you never found one of the things in your front yard when you went out to fetch in the milk and the morning paper. The other, or jumbo-cup size, says Mr. Taylor, is a sure-enough flying ship, jet-propelled, and very much in accordance with the specifications set forth in the United States News and World Report article.

Mr. Taylor's story, too, has been denied officially, but the trouble with these official denials is that nobody listens to them any more. (If they did, where would Senator McCarthy be?) Yet for a very large portion of the customers, tales like Mr. Taylor's are now much too tame. Over in England, recently, there have been numerous apparitions of heavenly gravy boats and soup tureens, some of them flying very low indeed, so that the watchers could observe crews of queer little men inside them. Inside one flying porringer or pudding bowl that flew over Hampstead or some such place by early twilight recently, the little men could be seen having tea with crumpets and buttered scones, and a comforting sight it must have been.

Now the worst of these fanciful imaginings is that, when they are imagined often enough by a great many persons, they have a way of coming true. That's how it was with the airship, the self-moving vehicle, and the atomic bomb. So that if the flying saucers are now a reality, as so many seemingly intelligent people believe, we have doubtless only ourselves to blame. Thus it seems a great pity that those Irish country folk who, instead of flying saucers, have been seeing old-fashioned fairies and leprechauns can't communicate their fantasies to a larger part of the world.

Charles R. Drew

Dr. Charles R. Drew, whose life was snuffed out in its early maturity by an automobile accident on Saturday, was among the most gifted of American surgeons. He chose to devote his gifts to the advancement of medicine rather than to the advancement of a personal career or to winning the monetary rewards that were easily within his reach. In particular, he devoted his gifts to the training of young Negro surgeons desperately needed for the medical care of their race. It is said that more than half of the Negro surgeons who have been certified by the American Board of Surgery were trained by Dr. Drew, himself the first Negro to serve as an examiner on the board.

A native of Washington and a graduate of Amherst College and of the McGill University Medical School at Montreal, he came to Howard University as an instructor in pathology and an assistant in surgery in 1935. Subsequently, he was awarded a Rockefeller Fellowship in surgery at Columbia University. Since 1941, he has been professor of surgery at Howard and for several years past has served also as chief surgeon at Freedmen's Hospital. The Spingarn Medal was awarded to him in 1943 for "the highest and noblest achievement by an American Negro during the preceding year or years." He worked ardently to enlarge the meager opportunities for Negro doctors to receive training in American medical schools and hospitals. He will be missed, however, not alone by his own race but by his whole profession and by men everywhere who value scientific devotion and integrity.

Secretary Finletter

It is hard to think of a man better qualified to be Secretary of the Air Force than Thomas K. Finletter. Mr. Finletter is perhaps best known for the air policy study made in 1947 that bore his name. But he also is a distinguished attorney in private life who has had wide experience in Government. He was, for example, an assistant to the Secretary of State for three years; he was a consultant at the San Francisco Conference; and more recently he served as head of the ECA mission in London. He has had a superb opportunity to develop a long-range philosophy about the execution of national policy and where the military instrument fits into that policy.

The fact that the Finletter commission recommended a minimum of 70 groups for the Air Force is now being cited as an indication that Secretary Finletter may revive the air-power fight on Capitol Hill. We think this inference would place the new Secretary under a severe handicap. In the first place, the Finletter report was made more or less in a vacuum, on the basis of what the Air Force needed quite irrespective of other considerations. Mr. Finletter is too wise a man not to recognize the complementary importance of a sound economy, the needs of other services, the dovetailing of military and foreign policy, and the fact that new considerations have arisen since the report was made.

Secondly, the number of air groups in itself means nothing. Group is a relative term, and the composition of groups is constantly changing. It is the size of the groups and what is in them—and how these groups relate to intelligence estimates and to diplomatic endeavors—that is important. Mr. Finletter should be in a position to offer a more precise definition of the issues in what is largely a semantic squabble. We hope that as he does this he will regard the Air Force not as a special entity in itself, but as merely an important element in national policy.

Air Force Strength

Walter Lippmann, in his April article, points out (1) that air power is critically important, (2) that the Air Force we are maintaining is inadequate to carry on a sustained effort in event of war, and (3) that the country could far better afford an adequate Air Force than it could afford to be defeated.

After making these points, Mr. Lipmann concludes that the risk involved in building up our Air Force to an adequate size is too grave for us to take.

Mr. Lippmann does not tell us how our "air-frame weight" of 24 million pounds compares to that of Russia. It is presumed that Russia's "air-frame weight" is more nearly comparable to the 86 million pounds which Secretary Symington believes to be necessary for this country. We are told, also that Russia is continuing to build up her air force at an extremely rapid rate.

It seems to me that Mr. Lippmann's arguments add up to this: Through our shortsightedness in allowing our air strength to fall so far below that of Russia, we have placed ourselves in the perilous position of the mouse who is trapped by the cat. As long as the mouse remains motionless, it is relatively safe. Should the mouse try to escape it would surely invite the instant attack of the cat.

In the days when sea power was our first line of defense, it was unthinkable that any other nation, no matter how friendly, should maintain a Navy larger than our own. How stupid we are today, when our first line of defense is in the air, to allow a potential enemy to maintain so great an advantage over our own Air Force. READER.

"Edgar Rice Burroughs"

I appreciated your March 23 tribute to Edgar Rice Burroughs.

I would like to point out, however, that your statement "the life of apes in the remotest African jungles was the subject of all his subsequent books" is not wholly correct. I read 8 or 10 of Mr. Burroughs' books, but I never read Tarzan outside of the comic section. This apparent contradiction is a result of your not having mentioned the fact that Mr. Burroughs wrote an entire series of Martian stories during approximately the same period in which he wrote the Tarzan series. I can recall offhand titles such as Moons of Mars; Warlord of Mars, etc.

In addition, there are two of his books that I know of which deal with the land discovered at the earth's core (not including Tarzan at the Earth's Core) and a series dealing with the planet Venus.

Sex And Security

Though it is no longer considered civilized to be anti-Semitic, or in favor of Negro lynching, the homosexuals are still fair game for those who look for a scapegoat.

The charge that homosexuals are bad security risks is unfounded. Had Judy Coplon been a Lesbian (female homosexual) the mess she is in now would not have happened. Anyone reading spy stories knows that it is the dame-crazed young heterosexual male who succumbs to the wiles of a Mata Hari.

From the economical angle it would seem that the debt-ridden married men could be bought more easily than the well-heeled bachelor. Furthermore, those who fall victim to the vile blackmail rackets are in 9 out of 10 cases, normal people.

If Lieutenant Blick estimates the number of homosexuals in Washington as 5000, he probably refers to those homosexuals and bisexuals who have run afoul of the law and have a police record. According to Dr. Kinsey there would be 40,000 exclusive homosexuals in a city of a million.

Why has no one pointed out the much larger number of bisexuals, men and women, who indulge in sexual practices with both sexes? There would be about 340,000 of them in Washington according to Dr. Kinsey's figures. They would be bigger security risks as they are very anxious not to give away their double lives.

Because Hitler is supposed to have blackmailed homosexuals, do we have to follow his tactics? If all of the 95 percent of the population who, according to Dr. Kinsey, are sex offenders were apprehended it would take thousands of concentration camps and there would not be enough people left to feed and watch them! Lattimore Testimonial

As leaders in student government, publications, and honorary fraternities of the undergraduate schools of the Johns Hopkins University, we affirm our faith in the accepted laws and traditions of the United States. Accordingly, we believe Mr. Owen Lattimore, director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations, innocent until Senator McCarthy's charges are proven correct.

We urge the Senator from Wisconsin to repeat his charges in public without the protection of congressional immunity. Moreover we hope that Mr. Lattimore will be given ample opportunity to present his case.

Realizing the seriousness of the charges, we also ask the general public to refrain from passing judgment in the case until all sides have been heard from and sufficient information has been made public to permit objective decision.

Harold J. Laski

The preeminence of Prof. R. H. Tawney in the sociological domain is recognized throughout the world. In the Manchester Guardian Weekly for March 30 he has written an estimate of Professor Laski which he is singularly well equipped to make. I should like to associate myself with his appreciation, and I venture to send it to you in the hope that you may find room for it in your hospitable columns.

FELIX FRANKFURTER.

Washington.

"The sudden death of Professor Laski removes one who combined with unusual charm of personality a diversity of intellectual gifts bestowed on few. As scholar, teacher, publicist, and man of affairs he made his influence felt on several different planes of thought and action. He was almost equally at home in England and America; and, while he numbered among his friends leading figures in the public life of both, he was never too preoccupied to devote time and energy to the personal problems, whether of pupils, colleagues in the labor movement, and academic life, or victimized workers, which his unfailing kindness caused to be laid before him . . .

"Political science has its controversial aspects. Laski, who was not only widely read but sensitive to changes in the intellectual climate of his day, did not seek to shun them. His work as a political theorist passed through several phases. His earliest books, The Problem of Sovereignty (1917), which appeared when he was 24, and Authority in the Modern State (1919), invoked pluralistic theories of political organization to qualify what seemed to him a legalistic overemphasis on its formal aspects. They owed something to the writings of Figgis and to Maitland's introduction to a translation of part of Gierke's great work, as well as to contemporary programs of industrial self-government.

A Grammar of Politics (1925)—the first full-length synthesis attempted in the present century by an English writer—while it contained much else, contained the same argument on a broader front. It revealed not only familiarity with a formidable range of literature but a grasp of the practical working of political institutions surprising in one of the author's years.

"The appearance of his Communism two years later opened a new chapter. The impression made upon him by his study of Marx left its mark on a long series of pamphlets and books such as—to mention only three—Democracy in Crisis, Parliamentary Government in England and The Rise of European Liberalism; but a passion for liberty remained his strongest impulse. Hence, while he poured just contempt on the conventional cant which interprets freedom as the right of economically favored classes to exploit for their own advantage the power conferred on them by wealth, he wore his Marxism with a difference. There were moments toward the end of his life when he included among the enemies of his socialist commonwealth not only the open champions of property and privilege but the disciples who invoked the master's name as a cloak for tyrannies that belied his teaching.

"Laski's contributions to political thought will be more fairly judged a generation hence than they can be today. His brilliance as a teacher was visible from the first moment that he opened his mouth. Armed with a few lines on half a sheet of notepaper he could hold his hearers spellbound. He was equally at home with academic and less sophisticated audiences, and was as skillful in eliciting the best from individuals as in inspiring large gatherings. The secret of his power was simple. It was a genuine unforced affection for human beings and a delight in sharing his knowledge with them . . .

"He was not of those—a large and influential band—who regard the omission from the maxim, "Blessed are the discreet," as a regrettable oversight. There were occasions in his career when an excess of zeal on the side of the light betrayed him into utterances welcomed by his critics and—what he minded more—embarrassing to his friends. But if impetuosity is a fault it is a more pardonable one than a self-regarding prudence. The world would not be a worse place if more men were equally reckless in sacrificing their personal convenience, leisure, and health to the service of a cause."

Using Science To Aid Law

By Malvina Lindsay

Sex-Crime Studies

RECENT WAVES of sex crimes throughout the country have caused some shouting of the "Oughta-be-a-law" variety. Yet there is developing a widespread general attitude of "let's get at the root of this business." Hence surveys and studies in many places are preceding lawmaking. Significantly, the same attitude toward alcoholism, divorce, other social ills, is also gaining ground.

The problem of the sex offender against children who flees across State lines is necessarily legal—at least in its first phases—and Congress now has a bill that would give the Federal Government authority over such cases. This bill, in the traditional legal manner, provides specific prison sentences for those convicted.

But recently recommended by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York (on the basis of a study) as the more effective method of coping with such offenders is the indeterminate sentence plus psychiatric treatment.

Sex crimes against children have not only aroused and alarmed communities, but have waked them to the realization they we're getting nowhere with traditional methods of handling offenders. They have found they either had to try to cure culprits or keep them away from society for life. Hence many large cities have started clinics for diagnosis and treatment of citizens arrested for sex crimes.

CHICAGO recently was cited by the American Municipal Association, following a survey of treatment in 30 large cities, as having the "most comprehensive" program for handling sex offenders. In the Chicago clinic, operated by the sex bureau of the police department and the psychiatric institute of the Municipal Court, each individual arrested is handled according to his needs.

Meanwhile science seeks to discover what causes sex offenders and how they can be prevented. Its studies generally come back to the root of most criminal conduct, an unfavorable childhood.

Much scientific light is thrown on the sex offender by a 20-month study of 102 men in Sing-Sing prison, which Governor Dewey recently released. Almost all the men studied had emotional deprivation in childhood. Parents were usually dominating (often brutal) or overindulgent. But the report stresses it is not blaming parents for the offenders' crimes. That, it intimates, would be too simple a solution of a complex problem.

The report upsets some traditional ideas concerning the sex offender. The men studied were not oversexed, rather immature and underdeveloped emotionally and sexually. This explains why they turned to small children with their attention.

Researchers who made the study believed that about half of the men examined could be helped and a small number might be paroled and treated on the outside.

THIS STUDY and others emphasize that society has to reach deeper than laws to halt sex crime. The New Jersey State Commission on the Habitual Sex Offender recently reported that laws in the 12 States with sex legislation are completely ineffective. Governor Dewey, in transmitting the Sing Sing study to the New York State Legislature, emphasized that laws alone were not adequate to cope with sex crime.

This adds to modern society's complications. Gone are the good old days when passing a law took care—or seemed to take care—of every social problem that arose. Now if we are to curtail sex crime we must have more clinics—which is not nearly so simple as building more prison cells.

Also the problem of how to spot the offender early enough arises. And even more overwhelming is how to prevent sex offenders—or for that matter criminals of any type—from developing. For as the Sing-Sing report points out, it is childhood environment that determines what a person will do with his inherent abilities and weaknesses.

How are more children to be given the emotional security they need in order to develop normally? How are parents to learn how to create the home atmospheres that will keep children out of Sing-Sing? And how is the community to help the bewildered parents?

It is much simpler to pass laws than to grapple with these questions. But in the long run it is a lot more costly in crime, taxes, human suffering.

Special Interests

It is interesting to note that the chief architect in the House of Representatives of the Natural Gas Act of 1950 is the same Congressman who is primarily responsible for pigeonholing the District home-rule bill in the House District Committee. His name is Orren Harris of Arkansas.

In the one case he is the legislative agent of the special interests in the oil industry. In the other case he is the lobbyist inside Congress of the Washington Board of Trade. In both cases we see Mr. Harris in his true colors as the political spokesman of the profiteers rather than of the consuming public. HERBERT S. SMITH.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Note Of Urgency

SPEAKING in London on Tuesday, Mr. McCloy made what was in effect an appeal to the British to develop "a united Europe, of which Germany must be a part." This is for the time being our policy and the crucial question is whether it rests on a correct estimate and judgment of the situation. I do not believe that it does, and that there is a growing disparity between our official hopes and the actual evolution of ideas and forces in Germany.

Lippmann

In Mr. McCloy's own more recent statements about Germany there is a note of urgency rather than of confidence, and in the reports of many visitors to Germany, Mr. Joseph Alsop for example, there is an acute anxiety. There is a feeling in the air that in the great struggle about Germany, our own position is weakening, and that the destiny of Germany, which will determine the future of Europe, and the issue of war and peace, is eluding our control, our influence, and our guidance.

WE MUST ask ourselves whether the destiny which Mr. McCloy offers the German nations holds any reasonable prospect of being realized. To test that question practically Mr. McCloy's statement of our general hopes must be brought down to earth. Instead of a "united Europe" of which "Germany is a part," we are actually talking about uniting a part of Germany with a part of Europe.

In working on this project we tend to assume that it could be carried out if only the British and the French could be induced, pushed, and prodded into making concessions which would bring the Adenauer government in Bonn into a Western political and economic system. Even assuming that a Western political system exists, is it valid to assume that the western Germans will enter it? Is it true that a part of Germany can be united with western Europe in a system which can be prosperous and secure? The Germans, not we, will answer—are answering—these questions. There are strong indications that they will not and that they cannot enter such a western system.

THUS Dr. Adenauer, who is as "Western" as any patriotic German can be, is negotiating the conditions under which his western German government would be willing to enter the Council of Europe. Far from exhibiting enthusiasm at being invited into good company, even if he himself has such enthusiasm, he feels himself compelled to be not the wooer but the wooed. Why? Because the mass of the Germans shrink from subscribing to anything which can be interpreted as accepting a partitioned, disarmed and occupied Germany.

There is a considerable belief in Germany in favor of some sort of European federation or commonwealth. But that belief envisages Germany as a united and important power in the center of that European system. What Mr. McCloy feels able to offer the Germans is so far short of this that the main forces of German nationalism and patriotism are not now working with him but away from him and against him.

THE CRUX of the matter is, I am afraid, that our official conception of the German future is fundamentally in conflict with the vital interests and the aspirations of the German nation. The Germans are not west Europeans. They are middle or central Europeans. They are today the meeting place of two powerful military alliances. Neither of these alliances can bring them security. Neither can defend them. Neither can offer them a viable economic future within its own order exclusively. Neither has opened up to the German nation the prospect of a future in which it can play a role in the world.

What is happening in Germany was bound to happen among a people of such immense vitality and with such a profound sense of its historic mission and importance. The revival of German national feeling, which is not to be measured by, or identified with, the lunatic fringe of unreconstructed Nazis, is generating—though there is no foreign office and all that—what will become a German foreign policy.

This process is so far advanced, so it seems to me, that it is no longer useful to think of the German settlement as one that can be imposed by the occupying powers, either severally or jointly. We will not permit the Russians to impose their settlement on the whole of Germany. The Russians will not let us impose ours on the whole of Germany. What will happen is that somehow the future of Germany will be determined either by agreement among the Germans, by some powerful national movement which sweeps through all the parties, or the partition will break down in a civil war among the Germans.

THAT is why it is so necessary, I believe, to recognize soon that the German future lies in a reunited Germany which is committed by its own vital interests, as well as by treaty, to a neutralized, unentangled middle position in Europe. It would be vain to hope, too much to expect, voluntary and orderly statesmanlike agreement on such a solution. But the decisive point is not whether the Russians will agree. Nor is it whether this is the kind of solution which we would most prefer to see.

The decisive point is that the German nation is, as its spirit revives, as its leaders emerge from the underground and from the rubble, certain to seek an independent course—one which could lead to unity, security, and a leading position of power and influence in Europe. I should like to see us, while we still count for something in Germany, decide to mount that horse and ride it. If we do not, that horse will run away. And there will be a smash-up.

Bipartisan Policy

By Marquis Childs

Stubbornness, Yet Signs Of Hope

THE PROPOSAL for a nonpolitical commission to investigate charges of Communism in the State Department has the merit of common sense and ordinary decency. In the speech in which he made this suggestion Massachusetts' Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., aligned himself with the Republicans who have made clear their deep concern over the McCarthy technique of wild and indiscriminate accusations.

Childs

It could mean another step back on the road toward restoration of a nonpartisan foreign policy. And, incidentally, Republican Senators seem to be contributing far more toward this end than the Democrats.

A strange kind of political impasse exists in this connection. Or, so it is represented by friends of John Foster Dulles, who was until the campaign of last fall considered the chief Republican agent of the bipartisan policy, just as Senator Arthur Vandenberg had been until his illness the chief congressional moderator of that policy.

Now Dulles' friends are saying that there can be no true bipartisanism until Dulles is restored. They say this is the viewpoint also of Vandenberg as communicated to Dulles when he was in Washington last week for conferences at the State Department.

If this is indeed the case, then the possibility of getting back to a nonpolitical approach to the conduct of foreign policy is not very hopeful. It would seem to be an example in the political sphere of the irresistible force meeting the immovable object.

No one can be more stubborn than President Truman when he once makes up his mind. He is said to feel that Dulles forfeited his claim to participate in formulating the bipartisan policy when he featured in his campaign for the Senate last fall a fierce attack on the Truman domestic program.

THE RACE in New York State was a savage one. Dulles said that his opponent, Herbert Lehman, sought Communist support. Lehman retorted by charging Dulles with racial and religious prejudice.

Two days before the election Truman made a broadcast from the White House in Lehman's behalf. Dulles and his followers now say that this partisan act sabotaged the bipartisan foreign policy.

The President could change his mind. That is not, however, something that he does readily or with ease. The appointment of former Senator John Sherman of Kentucky, a Republican, to accompany Secretary Acheson to the Foreign Ministers' meeting in London next month was considered by the Administration as a major move in the direction of restoring a bipartisan approach.

If the President were to appoint Dulles, there would be no protest of any sort from Lehman. He has been urged to write the President putting himself on record against appointment of Dulles to any post and he has refused. Nevertheless, he would feel offended by such a move and so would many of his ardent followers. This would undoubtedly be a factor in the Senate race in New York this fall.

The State Department is making strenuous efforts to work more closely with both Republicans and Democrats in the Senate. Undersecretary James Webb is holding a series of briefings along with specialists of the department. Before these informal conferences are concluded it is hoped that at least 60 members of the Senate will have participated.

CHAIRMAN Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has revived consideration of a new approach that has great potentialities. This is to break down the committee into a series of subcommittees. Each subcommittee would deal with a separate part of the world and its problems and with the State Department officials handling that phase.

Several years ago Senator Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin strongly urged such a plan. This would provide not merely cooperation but expertness and knowledge where it is most needed.

There are signs that in spite of the Taft-Wherry-Bridges axis in the Senate, things are not quite so black as they seemed last week. The honesty and forthrightness of a number of Republicans, with Senator Lodge coming up with a new and positive proposal, is matched by the willingness of Democrats to consider spreading the authority more generously through the Senate committee membership. Along with this goes the State Department determination to get on friendly and workable terms with members of House and Senate. There is a great deal of wisdom in an editorial in the Arizona Daily Star which concludes:

"After a man has learned his job, we do not believe he should be fired or allowed to resign. The Star believes he (Acheson) is entitled to a vote of confidence which will include not only approval of the correctness of our present diplomatic policy but his exclusive right to determine who is wise as well as loyal in his own department.

McCarthy May List Witnesses For Loyalty Probe to Subpena

about Communist infiltration in the State Department, and that the subcommittee had done "absolutely nothing" with it.

He then offered, however, to produce the witnesses he had referred to, without naming them, in a Senate speech last Thursday about Lattimore. McCarthy said he felt reasonably sure that "some, if not all" would come provided a firm date were set for their appearance before the subcommittee and provided they were subpenaed.

He did not say, in his letter or in reply to reporters' questions, how many witnesses he would bring, or whether, as rumored, Louis Budenz, former Communist editor of the Daily Worker, was among them.

Earlier, McCarthy had written Tydings another letter, asking permission to cross-examine Lattimore today. Tydings answered with a refusal, standing on the reasons he had previously made to similar requests.

He said people McCarthy charged had not had the right to cross-examine him, and that it would be unfair to give McCarthy, who is not a member of the subcommittee, that right.

But, Tydings added, if McCarthy cared to ask questions, he could submit them to any member of the subcommittee, who would put them for him. In other words, McCarthy could cross-examine in a sort of remote control fashion.

Furthermore, Tydings said, McCarthy himself could reappear before the subcommittee as a witness and point out where he thought any testimony Lattimore had given deviated from the truth.

Meantime, it was disclosed yesterday, the President's Loyalty Review Board has also requested McCarthy's files. Board Chairman Seth W. Richardson told of this action in testifying before the Tydings subcommittee.

Richardson had been called before the group to explain the Review Board's procedure. He related that in over three million cases of Federal employes considered by the FBI, not a single case has been reported involving espionage.

Since the President's loyalty program was initiated in March, 1947, Richardson reported, the Review Board has reversed various Departmental loyalty boards in about half of the cases where the initial finding was that the employe in question was a loyalty risk.

The statistics appeared to be these:

Agency loyalty boards have found about 300 employes to be loyalty risks. Of these, the Loyalty Review Board has reversed the findings—in effect restoring the employe to his job—in 124 cases. In a like amount of cases, on appeal, the lower board's findings were sustained. In the rest of the cases, the employe apparently did not file an appeal.

In addition, it was learned, the Review Board has made a post-audit of 6209 loyalty cases, in which the agency board's findings were favorable to the employe. The Review Board concurred in these findings in 6018 cases, and remanded the remaining 191 back to the agencies, mostly for technical reasons, recommending additional procedures, correction of omissions, rehearings, etc.

Richardson stressed that the opinions of his board were purely advisory, "but there has been no instance" of the board's recommendations not being duly accepted by the agency head concerned.

He said his board has already set itself up to study all the cases McCarthy has mentioned, in accordance with a request for such action from President Truman.

It will, however, only consider the question of disloyalty—not security as such—since loyalty is the only issue within its purview and, actually, the only question that the Tydings committee was set up to investigate.

Earlier in the day, the subcommittee heard testimony from Gen. Conrad E. Snow, chairman of the State Department's Loyalty Security Board. He said that the Richardson Review Board had never reversed an adverse decision, i.e. a finding of disloyalty, by his board. Furthermore, Snow said, the department's administrative officer had never failed to execute an adverse finding—that is, to fire the employe in question.

2 Risks Found, 5 Resigned

Snow reported that his board found two employes to be security risks, and that five more resigned while charges were pending.

He said that since 1947, and as of March 1, this year, the board had considered 246 loyalty cases. Of these, the Richardson board had post-audited 199, and apparently had not yet taken up the remaining 47.

Of the 199, three were sent back with recommendations that a written interrogatory be sent to the employes, one case was remanded with recommendations that a hearing be held with the employe present, and no cases had been reversed.

Before Snow testified, the subcommittee heard from Donald L. Nicholson, chief of the State Department's security division, who described its procedure.

When he concluded, Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) snapped, "Have you done your duty?"

Nicholson, surprised, drew breath and said, "Yes, sir."

"Are There 205?"

McMahon went on, "are there 205 card-carrying Communists in the State Department?" His reference was to McCarthy's original charge to this effect in a political speech in February in Wheeling, W. Va.

"No," said Nicholson.

"Are there any Communists in the State Department?" McMahon went on.

"Not that I know about," Nicholson replied. "If I found one, he'd be terminated before noon today."

Later yesterday, the attack on Lattimore was joined on the Senate floor by Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), a strong opponent of the State Department policy on China.

Lattimore's "confidential" Far Eastern views, he said, closely parellel those expressed in 1928 by the Sixth World Congress of the Communist International, the 1945 constitution of the Chinese Communist regime and the China stand taken by the Communist Party in the United States.

MacArthur Held Ignored

Lattimore's policy recommendations, submitted at the request of the State Department, Knowland said, urged the United States to cut loose from Japan and Korea and to recognize the Communist regime in China.

While the Department was soliciting Lattimore's views it made no effort to obtain those of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, United States commander in Japan, Knowland said. He added that Lattimore bore a "terrific responsibility" for United States policy in the Far East.

"Mr. Lattimore and others he influenced in the Far Eastern division of the State Department have made a mighty contribution to the debacle which has taken place in China and in the Far East," he said.

. . . No Communists in State Department

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), that the State Department is Communist-infested will "boomerang."

"Mr. Truman's vigorous statement helps to offset the damage that was done," Harriman said on his arrival by plane from London. "Nevertheless, McCarthy's charges caused some confusion.

"My impression is that the people didn't believe it, and wondered what was back of it. When a man like Phil (U. S. Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup) is attacked, it naturally makes people wonder what the United States position is.

"I am satisfied that this is going to be a boomerang for McCarthy. There has been a lot of talk about people who are traitors from McCarthy. As long as we are talking of traitors, I wonder what he is going to do? It might be well to ask who has the interests of the United States most at heart—Phil Jessup or McCarthy?"

Two correspondents for the Russian newspaper, Pravda, have applied for membership in the Congressional press galleries.

Pravda is the official publication of the Communist Party in the Soviet Union. The two applicants, Ivan Filippov and Jrigorii Rassadin, are the first representatives of a Russian newspaper to seek gallery rights like those held by most Washington correspondents. Tass, the official Soviet news agency, now has five employes holding press gallery privileges.

Smaller Turbines May Give Higher Speeds to Ships

Schenectady, N. Y., April 5.—The Navy is building an experimental ship which may revolutionize warship propulsion, according to Rear Admiral David H. Clark, chief of the Navy Bureau of Ships.

Here today to examine experimental steam turbines being built by the General Electric Co. for the new destroyer Timmerman, Clark said the turbines will enable the ship, with a much smaller power plant, to attain higher speeds than present destroyers.

Mars Flying Boat Explodes and Burns

Honolulu, April 5 (AP).—The Marshall Mars, 7.5 million dollar worth of flying boat, was destroyed by explosion and fire today a mile off shore. Its seven crewmen barely escaped.

The 80-ton flying boat had gone up for a test flight. It had developed engine trouble yesterday.

Lieut. Comdr. Glenn E. Simmons, the pilot, said the No. 3 engine caught fire shortly after the takeoff. He had gained 1000 feet altitude. Simmons turned the plane back toward Keehi Lagoon, the seaplane landing off the Honolulu airport.

Watchers at the airport saw the giant craft, its engine blazing, land on the lagoon.

Simmons and the other six jumped clear in two life rafts. A crash boat picked up the seven.

Minutes after the crew quit the flying boat the 6000 gallons of high octane gasoline in the fuel tanks exploded.

The Navy veteran of the California-to-Hawaii service died hard. Flame and giant pillars of black smoke rose from the sea for half an hour. Most of the wreckage appeared to have sunk. Then, as the fire died down the hull nosed up out of the sea. Again flames arose. Half an hour later the last flames were snuffed out.

The Marshall Mars had been scheduled to leave yesterday for its home base at Alameda, Calif. After developing engine trouble the flight was called off. The No. 3 engine which caused all the trouble had been installed last night.

The Marshall Mars was one of four Martin flying boats bought by the Navy for a total of $30 million and placed in service in 1947.

It held the world's passenger cargo record. On May 19 of last year the huge plane flew from San Francisco to San Diego with 301 passengers and 7 crewmen aboard.

Conviction Illegal, Mrs. Madsen Tells District Court

By the United Press

Mrs. Yvette J. Madsen, who was found guilty in Germany of shooting her soldier husband, told the U. S. District Court here yesterday, her conviction was unconstitutional and "without sanction of law."

A habeas corpus petition was filed in her behalf by her father, Alfred Noack of Brooklyn, N. Y., and attornys, Joseph S. Robinson New York, and Dayton M. Harrington and James D. Graham, both of Washington.

Mrs. Madsen was convicted March 18 of shooting her husband, Lieut. Andrew E. Madsen, after a party during which she had been teased about her "Brooklyn accent." She was sentenced to 15 years.

The petition said Mrs. Madsen was charged before a United States Military Government Court with violating a German criminal law and that she was tried by a different court—the United States Court for the Allied High Commission for Germany.

Shaw Is Season's Top Playwright

By Jack Gaver

NEW YORK, April 5 (U.P.).—The critics' circle and the Pulitzer prize people must pass him by because his material is not new, but there is no question that the fairhaired playwright of the current season is George Bernard Shaw, who is loafing downstream toward 94 on a mighty tide of dollars.

Every week approximately $4500 passes from the offices of Producers Richard Aldrich, Richard Myers and Julius Fleischmann (yeast and gin family) to the sage of Ayot St. Lawrence, thence, in large part, to the tax coffers of Great Britain.

This money represents royalties from two Broadway hits that Shaw wrote more than 50 years ago—"The Devil's Disciple" and "Caesar and Cleopatra," in 1897 and 1898 respectively.

And Shaw is getting this money on what, for him, is a cut-rate royalty. For years he was unique in getting 15 percent of box office grosses. But since 1946 he has been taking only 10 percent from American commercial productions because he was persuaded that general theater costs had risen too high to make 15 percent royalty possible.

However, devaluation of the British pound last year has worked to his advantage. Roughly, his $4500 is worth 580 more pounds sterling than it was before devaluation.

America always has done well by Shaw but never so well as in the past four years, which, in addition to the current revivals, has seen highly successful revivals of his "Pygmalion" and "Man and Superman." When Maurice Evans revived the latter, the royalties were so heavy that Shaw called a halt to plans for further productions of his plays that season so he wouldn't be in such a high tax bracket that the Chancellor of the Exchequer would take it all.

Marrying Money

IT WAS the original American Production of "The Devil's Disciple," by and with Richard Mansfield in 1897, that gave the previously impecunious Shaw sufficient money to get married. The sum was $15,000, and on his honeymoon he wrote "Caesar and Cleopatra." This, like "The Devil's Disciple," also had its world premiere in this country, in 1906, and was received warmly by the critics.

But both of these plays originally got short shrift from the English critics. Shaw moaned that the British writers didn't understand "Disciple," dismissing it as romantic hokum. Actor Forbes-Robertson was called "a finished scoundrel" by a Yorkshire newspaper for appearing in it.

When London saw "Caesar and Cleopatra" in 1908 it was a failure and its critics lapeled it little more than opera bouffe. Shaw said that by 1920 the British would consider it a masterpiece, but he was seven years off in his guess because it became a London hit in 1913.

In addition to the two Shaw productions on Broadway this season, noncommercial off-Broadway groups have been giving him a heavy play. They have presented "Saint Joan," "Heartbreak House," and "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet" since the first of the year.

No Engineers Available Now For Cox Job

Because of a shortage of Army engineer officers, Assistant Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox will probably not be replaced immediately when he is transferred next month.

An Army spokesman last night said there is no one now available to replace Lieutenant Colonel Cox at the District Building—and there may not be for some time.

Failure to assign a successor immediately would in no sense be an economy move, he said. It is simply a case of not having a man for the job. The post will be filled as soon as possible.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said if the vacancy should continue for any length of time it would throw a heavy burden on his other two assistants. He said he had not been informed whether a replacement would be immediately available.

The Engineer Commissioner normally has three assistants, each of whom is directly in charge of certain departments.

Except for a brief period 15 months ago, the three positions have been filled constantly since the war, Young reported.

Cox has been ordered to duty in Germany after nearly three years on General Young's staff.

Missing Girl Student Located in Florida

Harrisburg, Pa., April 5 (AP).—Gertrude Colston Nauman, Bryn Mawr College student missing since March 24, was located today in Miami Beach, Fla.

The girl's socially prominent parents, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer G. Nauman, said the 19-year-old girl telephoned them at their home here. The father left immediately for Florida.

Mrs. Nauman said the girl was suffering from nervous exhaustion and had been living alone in a hotel at Miami Beach since she disappeared from Bryn Mawr.

Gulf, Sinclair Report Drops In Year's Net

By S. Oliver Goodman

Two giants of the oil industry, both of whom operate extensively in Washington, reported last night that net income for 1949 was the second best in history although under the previous year's record level.

Swensrud

Gulf Oil Corp. showed net income of $100,877,041 or $8.89 a share for 1949, according to President S. A. Swensrud. This compared with $153,539,299 or $13.53 a share in the previous year. Revenue from sales of products and other operations aggregated $969,502,768 or about 99 million dollars less than in 1948. With the exception of 1948, the year 1949 was a record one for Gulf in almost every respect, Swensrud said.

Sinclair Oil Corp. reported net income of $54,073,338 for 1949, equal to $4.51 a share. President P. C. Spencer pointed out that this compared with 1948 net of $81,048,602 or $6.76 a share. Gross operating income, he added, aggregated $584,460,573 last year, about 52 million dollars less than in 1948, which was a record year.

Spencer

"Perhaps the most important old truth reaffirmed by the events in 1949," Spencer said, "is the fact that there is a virile, militant competition in the oil industry and that our economic laws are still paying the highest rewards to the low-cost producer, the fellow who gets there first with the best products at the least cost . . ."

Gulf Oil supplies more than 150 gas stations in the Washington area and operates a bulk plant and water terminal on South Capitol st. It employs about 400 persons here.

Sinclair supplies 120 outlets in this area, including independent dealers and leased and owned stations. It has the only fuel oil pipe line entering Washington and a terminal. It employs about 160 persons here.

Bridges Opens Fight To Void Conviction

San Pedro, Calif., April 5 (U.P.)—Harry Bridges opened his campaign to reverse his perjury-conspiracy conviction today by claiming he was "framed" by the United States Immigration Service and "certain elements in the labor movement."

As leaders of his CIO longshore union along the West Coast mapped plans for carrying his case "to the people," Bridges lashed out at teamster union leader Dave Beck, his long-time enemy.

He said one of the Immigration Service officials who sat in on the prosecution got his job through Beck.

Bridges and other leaders were here for a meeting of leaders of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CIO) which Bridges heads as president. His two codefendants, convicted with him yesterday on allied Federal charges of conspiracy and aiding and abetting Bridges in commiting perjury, accompanied him here from San Francisco.

A call was out from the ILWU for all "workers, professionals and intellectuals" to rally to Bridges' cause. The union's depleted treasury will need substantial refilling to carry on the legal and political phases of the case, a union source said.

Bridges' own defense attorney, Vincent Hallinan, estimated the defense cost Bridges, his associates, the union and other contributors about $110,000.

Next Monday the first important legal round of the battle of appeal opens when Federal Judge George B. Harris hears defense motions for arrest of sentencing and a new trial.

On that same day Bridges and his co-defendants are scheduled to be sentenced. They could each get a maximum of seven years in prison and/or fines of $15,000.

Judge Harris can cancel Bridges' naturalization, which a Federal jury held yesterday was obtained by perjury and fraud when he swore he never was a Communist.

Bridges flatly denied again today that he ever was a Communist.

CIO Orders 2 Unions Tried On Pro-Communist Charges

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The CIO yesterday continued its drive to expel pro-Communist affiliates by ordering trials for the American Communications Association and the Fur and Leather Workers.

The ACA, a small union, with members chiefly employed by Western Union in New York, goes on trial here next Tuesday before a three-man board.

The Fur Workers, headed by Ben Gold, an avowed Communist, is a fairly large union, with 100,000 members in this country and Canada. It will stand trial April 18.

Six unions have been ousted by the CIO since its convention last fall on charges of following the Communist line. They are the United Electrical Workers; Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Food Tobacco and Agricultural Workers, United Office and Professional Workers, United Public Workers, and Farm Equipment Workers.

Ouster hearings will be held later for Harry Bridges' International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, the Marine Cooks and Stewards, and the International Fishermen.

In Seattle, a hearing was conducted yesterday by John Brophy, director of CIO industrial union councils, on demands that the CIO withdraw the charter of the Washington State Council for failure to follow CIO policy.

Green Holds Out Hope For CIO-AFL Merger

New Orleans, April 5 (U.P.)—AFL President William Green held out hopes today that his organization might merge with this country's other largest labor organization, the CIO.

Green said that when he returned to Washington he probably would confer with CIO President Philip Murray, who proposed yesterday that a CIO-AFL committee be set up to act on economic, legislative and political matters.

Green, here to address the annual convention of AFL State trade unions, said chances for an AFL-CIO merger are the best since the unity conference of the two labor organizations broke up six years ago.

"Amalgamation (with the CIO) has been the traditional attitude of the AFL," Green told reporters. "We have always sought . . . the blending of both into an international union."

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Grant, Lee To Meet at Dedication

Robert E. Lee's meeting U. S. Grant here April 15.

Then they're going down to Appomattox to hear a blue-clad band march down a Virginia road playing "Yankee Doodle" by request of certain Virginians.

Of course, those Virginians have seen to it that a gray-clad band will be marching up the same road at the same time playing "Dixie."

It's all part of the plan for the April 16 dedication of the Appomattox Court House National Historical Monument, and of the restored McLean House, where General Grant met General Lee 85 years ago to end a long war.

Some of the details of the celebration were told yesterday by Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D., Va.) as he invited his House colleagues to attend the ceremonies.

The Grant-Lee meeting in Washington on April 15 will be at the Washington National Airport. It will bring together Robert E. Lee, 4th, great-grandson of the Confederate general, and Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, grandson of the Union general and eighteenth President of the United States.

Lee, 24, will fly here from San Francisco and will be greeted at the airport by General Grant and Representative Abbitt about 11 a. m. Abbit said that Lee is to go that day to Appomattox, and General Grant will go there the day of the celebration, Sunday, April 16.

Abbitt said ceremonies of dedication will begin about 1:30 p. m.

Among the speakers for the dedication will be Governor John S. Battle of Virginia, Senator Virgil Chapman (D., Ky.) and Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, historian, editor and biographer of General Lee.

Enforcement Of Alimony Urged in Md.

Baltimore, April 5 (AP).—A circuit judge ruled today that Maryland should enforce alimony decrees obtained in courts of other States.

Judge Emory H. Niles gave his reasons in a 13-page opinion setting forth his decision on a Virginia divorce. He said Maryland courts should treat the Virginia divorce and its accompanying alimony order the same as if it had been the order of a Maryland court.

The decision was made in the action brought by Mrs. Gladys E. Knight of Alexandria, Va., against her former husband, William C. Knight, a Baltimore electrician.

Mrs. Knight got a divorce in Virginia in 1947 for adultery after they had been married 20 years. Knight moved here and married again.

The Virginia court had ordered him to pay $35 a week alimony. After he remarried, the payments stopped. One time he returned to Virginia and was arrested for failing to pay the alimony. He made a $500 settlement. His former wife contends he now owes her $3130.

It is expected that the ruling by Judge Niles will be taken to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The decision reverses the general policy in the past under which Maryland and most other States have taken no action against anyone who owed alimony in another State.

Lane Paroles Homesick Man

Annapolis, Md., April 5—(AP)—Governor Lane today commuted the sentence of a prisoner charged with escaping from a Maryland jail because he was homesick for Missouri.

The Governor released Kenneth D. Lavezzi, 21, of Weaubleau, Mo., on parole to Missouri authorities.

Lavezzi was given a sentence of not more than four years for breaking and entering a general store at Aberdeen, Md., in 1946, while an Army rookie at Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

Lane announced these paroles:

George F. Green, 72, served four months of a one-year sentence in House of Correction in Prince Georges County Circuit Court of assault and battery.

John W. Holeman, 30, sentenced to seven years in penitentiary by Prince Georges County Circuit Court for storehouse breaking and larceny; served three lions back into their cage.

The bears apparently had worked on the bars of their own cage until they released the sliding catch. This let them into a safety run behind the cages. After exploring the run, they evidently went to the door of the lion cage and, somehow, opened the bolt on that door. Then the trouble started, with Simba finally chasing the bears back to their own cage.

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., April 5.—The Yankees, Red Sox and Tigers are understandably reluctant to give the pennant back to the Indians, who last won it in 1948, but not as yet can Cleveland be read out of it.

Lou Boudreau is bringing his Indians East from Tucson, loaded, he hopes, with the kind of ball players who could take it all. He's been patching furiously, with Hank Greenberg's help, ever since their forlorn third-place finish in 1949.

POVICH

The pivotal figure in the rebuilt Indians is their large colored fellow, Luke Easter, who knocked down most of the fences in the Coast League and right now hits a ball farther than anybody in the majors. With what frequency he will hit major league pitching remains to be noted, however.

Easter represents some of Greenberg's long-range planning. He jerked the big guy out of Bucky Harris' San Diego team last midsummer at a time when Easter was leading the league in all departments of hitting, and brought him to Cleveland for a knee operation. He wanted Easter ready for the 1950 Indians.

THIS SPRING, Easter was off to a slow start and was the flop of the training camp for three weeks. Then he started hitting, and right now he has the right field job wrapped up. That's a change in Boudreau's plans. Easter was supposed to take over Mickey Vernon's first base job, but Boudreau wants both of their bats in his lineup.

There have been the usual reactions about such as Easter, who come out of the minors with big batting averages. Leo Durocher of the Giants says, "He can be pitched to," and Mickey Grasso of the Nats echoes the same critique. Grasso claims that Seattle pitchers "slowed up on him and I doubt if he made more than two hits against us all last season."

But Greenberg personally scouted Easter on the Coast last season and saw no flaws. Big Hank prides himself on his talent for scouting hitters and declares, "I think I know about big men like myself. If Easter can't hit big league pitching, I'm dead wrong. You know they can fool any hitter three times out of five and he still winds up hitting .400."

IT WAS THE HORRIBLE slump in Cleveland's hitting, plus the flop of freshman sensation Gene Bearden, that took the Indians out of the race last season. Boudreau himself dropped off from a .355 average to .284. Ken Keltner dived 65 points to a weak .233. The third infield veteran, Joe Gordon, fell 29 points, and Outfielders Larry Doby and Dale Mitchell were caught in the general slump.

Boudreau's own failure to hit .300 after his sensational batting in their pennant-winning year of 1948 recalls that Bill Veeck tried to trade him to the Browns a month after Boudreau led the Indians to the championship. He did not greatly esteem Boudreau as a strategist, and actually said: "Boudreau didn't manage the club to the pennant, he won it with his bat."

Easter is supposed to take up a lot of the slack in the Indians' hitting, but Boudreau foresees better pitching for the club. Not especially from Bob Feller, but from Bearden who has been showing better control of his southpaw knuckler. And this year he won't waste the hard-balling Mike Garcia in relief roles for half the season.

WHEN BOUDREAU took the wraps off Garcia as a starting pitcher he wound up with a 14 won, 5 lost record. The relief work, shouldered mostly by Garcia and the unpredictable Sam Zoldak, now will be taken over chiefly by little Jesse Flores, the former Athletic who came out of the Coast League. Bucky Harris wanted Flores badly.

It's on the bench that Boudreau holds a far stronger hand than last season. If Mickey Vernon doesn't produce with his bat, Boudreau can wheel in Bob Conyers, the Texas League's leading hitter, as his first baseman. And if Keltner doesn't bounce off his hitting slump, the now well-seasoned Al Rosen will take over at third base.

But the man who holds the answer to the Indians' success or decline is Boudreau himself. For the first time in years, he wasn't the league's best shortstop last season. He slowed, both in the field and at bat. This year, Boudreau more than anybody else, will take the Indians wherever they are going.

Yanks Defeat Cards, 8-4, As Reynolds Goes Route

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 5 (AP).—Allie Reynolds became the first New York pitcher to go the distance today as he hurled the Yankees to an 8-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Reynolds, who pitched only four complete games last year, throttled the Cardinals on nine hits. Stan Musial accounted for three of the blows. Reynolds held the Cards well in hand until the ninth when he yielded two runs.

The Yanks plastered Harry Brecheen, Fred Martin, and Tom Poholsky for 12 hits with Phil Rizzuto and Joe Collins leading the way with three blows each. One of Rizzuto's socks was a home run.

Joe DiMaggio pulled a muscle in his left calf running to first on a grounder in the first inning and left the game. However, it was later reported the mishap was not very serious.

NCAA May Allow Room, Board

Chicago, April 5 (AP).—The executive committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association indicated today that the controversial "sanity code" probably will be modified.

The committee set up machinery that probably will bring recommendations to the 1951 NCAA convention in Dallas for softening of regulations that govern subsidization of college athletes.

Sentiment appears to be in favor of altering the code to permit board and room in addition to tuition. This would please Southern schools that rebelled at last winter's NCAA meeting in New York.

The NCAA decided to double the size of its postseason basketball tournament, the final round of which will probably be played elsewhere than Madison Square Garden.

Next year 16 teams instead of eight will be selected under new rules procedure.

The executive committee of the NCAA met with 20 college conference commissioners to consider the much-debated "sanity code." Hugh Willett of Southern California, NCAA president, presided.

The committee and the commissioners decided:

1. To analyze prevailing college athletic practices governing aid to athletes and decide which ones are good and which are bad.

2. To analyze the "sanity code" and see if the practices which are considered acceptable can be pursued under it, and, if not, what modifications would be needed.

Mont Boomed For Maryland Basketball Job

Tommy Mont, former Maryland University football, basketball and lacrosse star, is being boomed for the vacant basketball coaching berth at his alma mater, it was learned last night.

Mont, a reserve quarterback for the Washington Redskins, is currently coaching the freshman lacrosse team at Maryland.

"I haven't heard anything officially," Mont said last night, "but I'm definitely interested. It sure sounds good."

Athletic Director Jim Tatum, who will name a successor to Flucie Stewart, who resigned as basketball coach Monday, was in New York last night and could not be reached for comment.

Alumni who are booming Mont for the job point out that he could serve as an assistant backfield coach in football as well as handle the varsity basketball team.

A native of Cumberland, Md., Mont lettered in basketball three times at Maryland and was considered a better basketball player than football. After two years as a defensive halfback for the Redskins, Mont blossomed out as an offensive star in the last three Redskins games.

He joined the Redskins in 1947.

Help (?) From Heaven

Sandalio Consuegra, Another Cuban, Nats' Newest Pitcher

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., April 5—Pitching help from out of the clouds will drop into the Nats' camp any day now—Bucky Harris hopes. He's scanning the airplanes from Cuba with new interest awaiting the arrival of Senor Sandalio Consuegra.

It was not a name to strike a bell with Harris when the Nats set up camp here on March 1. "Just another Cuban pitcher," was Harris' reaction and he was mildly unexcited when Consuegra balked at reporting.

Anyway, the fellow had won only 6 and lost 5 for Havana in the Class B Florida - International League last season. And with the Nats already was Conrado Marrero, the stocky righthander who had won 25, lost only 8, in the same league.

Harris could be forgiven for believing that Marrero represented any pitching help the Nats might get from Cuba. And when Marrero proved unimpressive in the spring games, he despaired of any help from the Pearl of the Antilles.

But Harris' other rookies flopped in concert with Marrero, and he is now desperate. For a couple of weeks he has been hearing that Consuegra, not Marrero, is the better pitcher.

Travelers from Cuba report that their records in the Florida-International League aren't significant.

"They tell me that the winter league is the important league in Cuba," says Harris, "and that Consuegra was the best pitcher in it. It's almost Triple A, and if the fellow can do that well in that sort of company, I want a look at him."

Consuegra is a smallish right-hander with a fast ball, Harris hears. He originally refused to report to the Nats, holding out for a bonus. Clark Griffith snorted that "he's trying to hold us up. I won't give him another penny." But with Harris' pitching situation what it is, obviously Griffith has raised the ante for Consuegra, who was threatening to summer it out in Cuba.

En route with Consuegra is Outfielder Roberto Ortiz, who may be used for pinch-hitting duties but has small chance to break into Harris' outfield otherwise. Harris doesn't want to sacrifice the speed and defense of his outfield by bothering much with Ortiz.

IN SHORT . . . The Nats are minus a rookie pitcher today. Howard (Dizzy) Sutherland packed up and went home to Washington. He was ticketed for Charlotte, but all of a sudden he phoned Vice President Calvin Griffith he was quitting, and didn't wait for transportation money . . . Sutherland figured not at all in Harris' pitching plans . . . tomorrow and Friday are also open dates for the Nats . . .

Stalling Fails, Packers Lose To Minneapolis

Minneapolis, April 5 (AP).—The Anderson, Ind., Packers tried a new technique on the Minneapolis Lakers tonight but their fate was the same as two previous playoff opponents, a 75-50 verdict against them.

The victory sent Minneapolis one up in the best-of-three semifinal series in the National Basketball Association. The second contest will be played at Anderson Tomorrow night.

The visitors took a 4-2 lead at the start of the game and immediately began a stalling offense which kept the Lakers without a field goal for more than nine minutes.

George Mikan, who wound up with 26 for the night's top, dropped the first Minneapolis bucket with 2 minutes, 51 seconds to go in the first period, on an assist from Jim Pollard. Anderson hung closely and the first quarter score was 7-all, remarkably low for the circuit.

Golfing Greats Open Masters' Tourney Today

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Augusta, Ga., April 5 (AP).—The top flight of the touring golf professionals who have been doing horrendous things to par all winter, plus a dozen selected amateurs, will start their spring tour tomorrow in the fourteenth Masters Tournament.

Outwardly, it's just another $10,000, or more, 72-hole stop on the year-round golfing trail. But in most respects, there's nothing quite like the Masters, and that's why most stars would rather win it than anything except the National championships.

There's little likelihood that anyone will turn in a series of sub par rounds such as Sam Snead's 264 for 72 holes in the Texas Open at San Antonio or Jack Burke's 264 at Harlingen, Tex.

Snead, who scored 282 last year to win by 3 strokes from Mangrum and Johnny Bulla, ranks as favorite to repeat despite a back ailment that kept him out of the Wilmington, N. C., Open last week.

And bracketed right with him is his former keen rival, Ben Hogan, whose endurance still is uncertain as the result of an injury he suffered in an automobile crash a year ago.

Unable to make the regular tour, Hogan took a long rest before coming here to shoot for his first Masters title. Although he has tired from walking over the hilly terrain, Ben has looked exceptionally good in practice.

Arcaro Rides Virginia Colt; Brady Entry Finishes 2-3

By John Chandler

New York, April 5 (AP).—Hill Prince, pride of Virginia, proved he would be a tough horse to beat in the Kentucky Derby when he sloshed through the slop and rain at Jamaica today to capture the $20,000-added Experimental No. 1 Handicap after trailing most of the way.

The bay son of Princequillo-Hildene, rated among the top juveniles of last year, was making his first start of 1950, and he showed the crowd of 19,834 that it will take a lot of horse to beat him in the Kentucky Derby May 6.

Hill Prince ran in sixth place in a field of seven 3-year-olds down the backstretch. Then, through the fog and rain, the C. T. Chenery colt slammed through and caught the pace-setting Starecase about a sixteenth of a mile out. Hill Prince splashed under the wire a length and a quarter in front of Starecase.

Starecase, owned by James Cox Brady, was three lengths ahead of his stablemate, Casemate, with Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Foreign Affair fourth, another half length in the rear.

Hill Prince, who won six of seven races last year, toured the six furlongs in a 1:12 flat, good considering the track condition. The favorite of the rain-dampened crowd, the colt returned $.20, $2.40 and $2.40 fo r$2 across the board.

"I tried to be a little closer the first part of the race," Arcaro said of Hill Prince. "But he insisted on running his own race, and when he decided to run he really set it in.

"He's as good as last year, and that's something."

Greentree Stable's Guillotine, second choice in the mutuels, was a disappointing sixth.

Arcaro held his whip alongside the colt's head after they went under the wire, and Hill Prince was sent on to complete a full mile workout, which was caught in 1:40 flat.

Macks Sell Marchildon

West Palm Beach, Fla., April 5 (AP).—Phil Marchildon, who two years ago was one of the American League's top pitchers, was sold out of the major leagues today.

Owner-Manager Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics sent Marchildon to their Buffalo farm of the International League for an undisclosed sum. Marchildon suffered from a sore arm and "war nerves" during the past two seasons.

Mack said all 15 major league clubs failed to claim the big right-hander for the $10,000 waiver price.

While with the A's, exclusive of 1943-44-45 when he was in service, Marchildon won 68 and lost 75. His best seasons were in 1942-(17-14 with an eighth place club) and 1947 (19-9 when the A's finished fifth.)

In 1949 the resident of Penetanguishene, Ontario, Canada lost three decisions while winning none.

White Perch Finally Make Appearance

By Ralph Murdock

FISHERMEN and anglerettes, take notice. The anticipated arrival of white perch is now a reality. Up until Monday afternoon a young fortune in bloodworms was squandered on the snooty perch in the Upper Potomac, to no avail.

Murdock

The finny tribe merely eyed the tasty morsels offered them with a stiff upper lip. They were just not in the mood and wanted to be left alone.

Retired Maj. Virgil Johnson, who never accepts "no" from the piscatorial tribes, selected the Fourteenth Street Bridge as the likely spot to entice the meanies. The major really picked a winner, for in an hour and a half he caught 15 perch.

Just to prove that the achievement was no fluke the ex-army officer returned the next day and broke his own 1950 accomplishment by reeling in over 40 of the game little scrappers.

DAME FORTUNE, on the same two days, also smiles gently on L. P. Ditman, another fisherman who was plying his wares on the hickory shad in the upper Patuxent River, near Queen Anne's Bridge—located about seven miles from Largo.

Weekend Suggestions Where They Are Biting

Yellow Perch—Severn River, off Herald Harbor seems best. Catches normal. Boats and minnows can be had there.

White Perch—Good catches being made at the Virginia side of the 14th st. bridge. Moving northward. Bloodworm is the preferred bait for this species. One catch of 40 reported.

Rock Fish—The stripers have been hitting all winter. Bloody Point Light in Eastern Bay is our choice. Trolling is the method. Steel lines do a better job. Lusby lures are ideal. Boats obtainable at Herring Bay.

Shad—The hickories are now hitting. Upper Patuxent is our best bet. Casting with Shad-o and Nungesser silver spoons will do the trick.

Victor Pays $9.40 as On Finishes 4th

By Walter Haight

Laurel, Md., April 5.—Honeywell Farm's Faneuil Miss, who won three races last year before she bucked up against the likes of Bed O'Roses, made a successful 1950 debut here today. The daughter of Teddy's Comet and Crawfish was an easy winner by three and a half lengths in the Anacostia, a test exclusively for 3-year-old fillies.

Faneuil Miss, nominated for the Kentucky Derby but a very doubtful starter, led Thorncliff Farm's Busy Pat into the wire before a mid-week crowd of 8860. A length and a half behind the place came Mrs. Ada L. Rice's Coming Event to nose out High Ground Stable's On, the latter the heavily backed favorite in the field of seven.

Apprentice Jimmy McDermott, star of the recent Charles Town meeting, was aboard Faneuil Miss and sent her the 6 furlongs in a creditable 1:11 1-5. Her backers received a $9.40 win mutuel.

The daily double, after being in the clouds as far as pay-offs were concerned, got down to earth today. The 5-and-3 combination was good for $20.20. Grant Thorn's Hooked won despite trying to bolt out entering the stretch in the opener, the juvenile paying $4.20 as the favorite.

In the second race, Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., kept Mrs. E. J. Reed's War Glance going in front to win at an $8.80 mutuel.

The program was unique in that no track record was broken but I know several guys who went broke.

Corning Proposes Land Swap For Coolidge Stadium Site

Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning yesterday asked the Board of Education to try to swap land with the Recreation Department so the schools can build a stadium adjacent to Coolidge High.

"It is absolutely essential that divisions 1-9 (the white high schools) have a new stadium," said Corning.

Albert E. Steinem, chairman of the board's athletic committee added that, since the transfer of Central and its stadium to use by Negro pupils, "the white high schools are in need of a top rate lighted stadium and should be given priority "over a stadium which is being asked for by Dunbar High.

Corning pointed out that board representatives must first get approval of the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in any proposed transfer of land that is now under Recreation Department jurisdiction.

If the swap is completed, the board will ask Congress to add a supplemental appropriation in the budget so that construction on the stadium can be started immediately.

The site picked for the new stadium is behind Coolidge High, west of Third st. nw., and north of Sheridan st. It is under Recreation Department control.

The schools are willing to give the Recreation Department land north of Coolidge, where outdoor clay tennis, volley ball, basketball and handball courts are located.

The schools are reluctant to build a stadium on land controlled by the Recreation Department because the latter agency might have a claim on gate receipts.

Corning also presented an insurance plan to protect high school athletes, which he said should be paid for out of public funds. He pointed out that 43 State high school athletic associations now have athletic accident benefit plans. The board's athletic committee will talk it over at its next meeting.

Jack Rabbitt Wins Combined Hunts Feature

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Middleburg, Va., April 5.—Col. Barrington Wilson's owner-ridden Jack Rabbitt from Potomac, Md., lone Washington entry, today won the feature race at the Combined Hunts point-to-point meeting.

Colonel Wilson stayed near the pace set by Nicky Arundel on his sister's Spring Song. Tipperary Stables Kings Aid had bolted off the course with Nicholas de Felsovanyi in the saddle and Jack Rabbitt moved to the front at the next to the last fence to win with ease by some eight lengths.

The ladies race went to R. V. Clark's Happy Chance, on whose Stoneleigh Farm the meeting was held, with Sally Roszell of Markham, Va. doing her usual competent job in the irons. Mrs. Barrington Wilson had the mount on Tipperary Stables' Why Not, to take down the place money after a game effort.

Terps Win as Crescenze Gets 3 Hits in 4th Straight Game

The University of Maryland won its fourth straight game yesterday, 8-4, over Pennsylvania at College Park and for the fourth consecutive game, Shortstop Eddie Crescenze banged out three hits to pace the winners.

Gordon Kessler went the distance for the Terps, and although he allowed eights hits and gave up seven walks, he was tough in the pinches.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

Changes Will Be Sought In Civil Service Reforms Urged by Hoover's Unit

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report will propose several changes in the bill that is intended to carry out the sweeping Civil Service reforms recommended by the Hoover commission. They are:

1. That the provision to overhaul the salary-fixing system of most Federal workers be stricken from the bill and be considered in a separate measure. It would have the Government establish area wage boards to set the salaries of most classified and postal workers. The boards would consider private wages and the cost of living in fixing salaries.

2. That in making layoffs, veterans with 10 points preference, disabled veterans, be placed in a special group and be given retention preference over all other employes.

3. That the President require department heads to confer with employes, as individuals as well as through their organizations in the formulation of personnel policies and practices.

In addition, committee spokesmen will make it plain that the many Federal agencies, under the Hoover plan, would be able to recruit and hire professional, technical and other employes peculiar to their operations, and that the Civil Service Commission would be empowered to continue to hold examinations for the big mass of jobs such as clerks, typists, etc.

At a hearing yesterday before a Senate subcommittee headed by Senator Long (D., La.) a strong plea was made for salary fixing by local wage boards, the system now used to set the salaries of 500,000 per diem workers in Government.

The witness was Matthew Devine, a partner in Cresop, McCormick & Paget, the management firm that did much of the leg work on the Civil Service report for the Hoover commision.

He said the tendency now was to raise the Federal wage level to that of the high-cost communities, which he said, upset the established order in the lower-level areas. He also cited various instances of different Federal wage rates for similar jobs in a locality because of the several Federal salary systems.

Devine said there was a large potential saving to Uncle Sam if Federal workers were placed under an area salary system—savings that could only be made by cutting salaries of employes in lower cost living areas. However, the Hoover group wouldn't cut salaries for incumbents, but employes brought in after the provision became effective would get the adjusted rate.

GAO: Three assistant chiefs of the Accounting Systems Division at the General Accounting Office have been appointed. They are: E. T. Nolan, E. Reece Harrill, and R. S. Brumagin.

GSA: Thirty-day layoff notices have been given to more than 200 employes of the new General Services Administration. About 125 employes here are slated to get the ax at the end of this month. GSA will have to make a major reduction if its appropriation now before the House is approved.

REVENUE: The Albert Gallatin awards for long and meritorious service was given to these Internal Revenue employes on their retirement: Harry Weber, head of the accounting and audit division; Bessie A. Wright, claims examiner; Dr. Clifton E. Young, a chemist in the Alcohol Tax Unit, and Lee O. W. Bonhom, technical clerk. . . .

AGRICULTURE: L. M. Pultz has been appointed to direct research in drug and special crops.

NSRB: The National Security Resources Board is expected to expand under Stuart Symington, chairman designate. The Senate will be asked to restore the cut in its budget made by the House Appropriations Committee. Symington is expected to be invited by the President to sit in on Cabinet meetings, as his board is composed of Cabinet members.

PLAN 18: Postal custodial employes who would be transferred to GSA under the President's Reorganization Plan 18 would be allowed to retain their accumulated sick leave. They would be paid a lump sum for their accumulated annual leave. At GSA, they would come under the classified leave system, which is more liberal than the postal leave system. Regulation permitting these changes have been approved by Civil Service.

Too Drunk To Recall, Myers Says In Defense

Was 'Passed Out' 10 Hours During Time of Abortion; Affirms Innocence

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Ralph W. Myers testified yesterday that he was "completely passed out" during the 10 hours of January 4 and 5 when he is charged with performing the abortion that killed Nina Jean Campbell.

The 44-year-old Arlington window-shade salesman said the last thing he remembered on January 4 he was sitting on a bed in the apartment of his girl friend, "taking my drinks."

The first thing he remembered January 5, Myers testified he woke up "fully clothed" and took the bloody body of Mrs. Campbell in his arms.

Strongly Denies Guilt

Under questioning by defense attorney James J. Laughlin, Myers made an emphatic denial of guilt. "No!" he replied in a loud voice when asked if he had performed the abortion.

Later, under cross-examination by prosecutor John C. Conliff, he denied knowing "a thing about" a statement he signed after his arrest, in which he admitted starting the abortion on Mrs. Campbell.

During direct examination, Myers testified he went to the apartment of nurse Ruth Childs, 1321 Fairmont st. nw., at 7:30 p. m., January 4.

Had "Little Problem" for Him

He said he had already consumed all but "a couple of good-sized drinks" from a fifth of whisky by the time he arrived, and drank steadily until he passed out.

Mrs. Campbell and her aunt, Mrs. Mabel "Peggy" Earnshaw entered the apartment at approximately 9 p. m., he testified. He said he thought Mrs. Campbell's name was "Diane."

"While we were sitting there, jabbering mostly, I didn't have much to say. Miss Childs wanted to know what this Diane wanted, and I said, "Well, she has a little problem and I understand from Peggy she wants me to talk to her," Myers testified.

"I went in and sat down and after that I don't remember too much of anything."

Declares He Was Groggy

"What was your condition as to sobriety?" Laughlin asked.

"I was in bad shape . . . pretty well worn out, groggy."

"Tell us what you recall after that."

"I talked to this Diane. I thought I wanted to know what problem she came up there with, and she said something about a Dr. Anderson down in Maryland she wanted to see me about. And that's all I remember. I just went completely out of the picture."

Myers told Laughlin he woke up the next morning about 7. "I believed I had passed out. I was going towards the bathroom and I saw a bunch of books on the floor and looking that way, there was a body laying alongside the bed.

Fell in Lifting Her

"Right away I called 'Ruth, what has happened?' and went to her and lifted her head. I took a hold of her, I think under the pits of her arms, and doing that my right foot slipped in this pool of blood. It threw me the same time I lifted her."

Conliff later pressed Myers about the fall he said he had taken while lifting Mrs. Campbell. "She more or less landed on top of me, like," Myers replied.

"Are you the same Ralph Willard Myers that was convicted of performing an abortion in Arlington on December 20, 1945?" Conliff asked.

"Yes," Myers replied softly.

"That's all," Conliff said and sat down. Myers was sentenced to serve two years on probation for that charge, it was revealed.

Mrs. Hazel Cogar, 38, 1212 48th ave., Hillside, Md., mother of Mrs. Campbell, testified that her daughter had been "unwilling" to undergo an abortion and had been "under the domination" of her 20-year-old husband, Carlton.

Charles G. Cogar corroborated his wife's testimony, and said that he had not talked to his son-in-law since the death of his daughter.

Holy Thursday Rites Set by D. C. Churches

Today is Maundy or Holy Thursday.

It commemorates Christ's last supper with the 12 disciples on the eve of his Crucifixion.

In Protestant churches throughout Greater Washington, the day will be observed with Holy Communion services.

Several churches have planned fellowship meals at which the events of the last supper will be reenacted.

At Roman Catholic churches, celebration of the mass will include consecration of two hosts, one of which will be used for the mass and the other placed on an altar of repose aside from the main altar.

On this altar, decorated with flowers and hangings, the Blessed Sacrament will remain all day Thursday and throughout the night.

Tenebrae services began last night and will be conducted tonight and Friday in Catholic and some Episcopal churches.

Musical Services Prepared

Three-hour Good Friday services, commemorating Christ's agony on the cross, will be conducted in more than 80 churches from noon until 3 p. m. on Friday.

In other churches, brief rites will be held either in the afternoon or evening. Many have planned special Easter musical services for the day.

In Franklin Park, 14th and K sts. nw., the Catholic Evidence Guild will conduct its nineteenth annual Good Friday service of stations of the cross from noon until 3 p. m.

Lent will end at noon on Saturday.

The Gospel account of the Resurrection of Christ will be told at nine outdoor sunrise services in Greater Washington. These are Fort Lincoln Cemetery, National Memorial Park, near Falls Church; Calvary Lutheran Church, Silver Spring; Magruder Park, Hyattsville; St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Seat Pleasant, all at 5:41 a. m.; National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, 6:30 a. m.; Walter Reed Hospital, 7 a. m., and Arlington Cemetery, 7:30 a. m.

Scottish Rite Masons in the Valley of Washington will mark Holy Week with two services in the auditorium of the temple, 2800 16th st. nw.

The first service will mark the observance of Maundy Thursday at 8 p. m. today.

Parking Bans Eased For Good Friday Rites

Policemen in all precincts yesterday were ordered to give special consideration to those attending Good Friday services.

Major Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, asked the police not to give overtime parking tickets to those attending three-hour church services on Good Friday. The suspension of the parking rules applies only in the area of churches while services are being conducted, he said.

Physician Convicted In Auto Case

Dr. Robert R. Morris, 34-year-old director of the Montgomery County Mental Hygiene Clinic, was convicted by a Montgomery Circuit Court jury late yesterday of reckless driving in an automobile accident a year ago that took the life of a 17-year-old girl.

Dr. Morris

The nine-man, three-woman jury—in a verdict rendered after deliberating an hour and five minutes—found Dr. Morris innocent of manslaughter and a charge of failure to stop after an accident.

The case was tried on appeal by the psychiatrist against a conviction in Bethesda Police Court in May, 1949. There he was convicted of both manslaughter and failure to stop. He was sentenced then to a year on each charge, the sentences to run concurrently.

Dr. Morris will be sentenced on the Circuit Court conviction April 11 at 10 a. m. He was released under $1500 bond until then.

The fatal accident occurred April 10, 1949, on Route 240, just north of Grosvenor lane and near the Georgetown Preparatory School. Its victim was Juliette Ann Fleck, 17, of Youngwood, Pa.

The accident occurred when a car struck the auto in which Miss Fleck was riding, causing it to go out of control and strike a third vehicle head-on.

George Peoples of Youngwood, Pa., driver of the car carrying Miss Fleck, testified yesterday that the car that struck his was on the wrong side of a traffic-dividing line. He also said that it failed to stop.

Main witness for Dr. Morris was Miss Irene W. Starr of 3415 Wisconsin ave. nw. She testified that Dr. Morris' auto struck her auto, and that Dr. Morris and she pulled to the side of the road to investigate damage. She said she noticed, once the psychiatrist's car pulled away, that its left rear bumper was damaged.

Dr. Morris testified that when his car struck Miss Starr's, the impact seemed greater than the damage he first noticed.

He said the "bump" with the Starr auto occurred as he was trying to get into the line of traffic.

School Body Acts to Ease Crowding

Elementary Unit In Sousa, Request For Police Shift Approved for SE

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The Board of Education yesterday took emergency steps to prevent the increase of part-time education in southeast schools.

Action was approved after the board received a report that extra space will be needed for more than a thousand elementary school students in the Randle Highlands area in the next four years. Two hundred additional students next fall will enter the already overcrowded schools in the area.

Board members gave Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning permission to set up an elementary school unit in the Sousa Junior High School.

They also asked the Commissioners to have the Police Department vacate a temporary school building at 44th and H sts. se., now used as the Fourteenth Precinct station house.

Four Schools Overcrowded

Dr. Corning reported that the four elementary schools serving the area now are occupied by more than 350 students above their capacity of 2030. The schools are the Beers, Davis, Kimball and Randle Highlands.

He said that three of the schools, the Kimball, Davis and Randle Highlands, will be able to take additional students only by placing classes on half-day programs.

He predicted the enrollment increases on the basis of a recent school census in the area. He said that 65 school children from each 100 families is a conservative estimate of pupils expected when new homes now under construction or planned are occupied.

New School Urged

By next September the four schools with a capacity of 2030 students will have an enrollment of 2569. He added that the board should begin immediately to find land in the vicinity of Massachusetts ave. and N st. se. as a site for a new 16-room school.

School board members also approved the conversion of the Negro Cardozo High School from a specialized school offering courses in business training to a comprehensive high school patterned after the high schools in the white divisions. The conversion will take place next September.

In other actions yesterday the board:

Called on the Police Department to provide additional protection for school buildings. Dr. Corning said that in the past 10 weeks 32 schools have been broken into 47 times.

Asked the superintendent to report on the use of activity fees collected from students at the two teacher colleges. John B. McMahan, a member of the student council at Wilson Teachers College, appeared at the board meeting and reported that fees now are used to pay for library books and the salaries of office clerks.

Agreed to have five lights installed at the rear of Francis Junior High School, 24th and N sts. nw., as a crime prevention measure.

Roosevelt-Central Merger Hearings Ordered

Action on the proposed merger of Central High School with Roosevelt was postponed yesterday by the Board of Education to permit the holding of public hearings.

Board Member Albert E. Steinem asked for the delay after reporting that some students and alumni at Roosevelt have expressed opposition to the plan.

The hearing will be held before the next board meeting April 20 with the time to be announced later.

In Tax Case

2 Arlington Contractors Jailed, Fined

The two Arlington contractors who built the boulevards near the Pentagon were sentenced to prison and fined $15,000 each yesterday for income tax evasion.

Judge Sterling Hutcheson, of United States District Court in Richmond, sentenced Franklin McKenzie Davison to prison for two years. William Jennings Hardy was sentenced to serve a year and a day.

Davison, partner with Hardy in the Arlington Asphalt Co. and the Arlington Stone Co., was ordered to start his sentence on April 30. Judge Hutcheson said he would then decide when Hardy should go to jail. Both men were directed to pay the $15,000 fines by May 1.

They had pleaded nolo contendere, or "no contest," before Judge Hutcheson on February 16 to four counts of a six-count indictment. They were charged with wilfully concealing $217,806.27 of their income between 1942 and 1946 to evade taxes.

Internal Revenue Agent Richard R. Ray testified that the defendants had underestimated their partnership incomes by more than $150,000 from 1944 through 1946.

In fiscal 1944, Ray told the court, the Arlington Asphalt Co. reported net income of $84,378.80. This failed to take into account more than $34,000 in income falsely deducted as "expenses" and more than $5000 in "suppressed sales," he testified.

Fictitious checks were made largely to nonexistent payees and charged off as business expenses for equipment rental, finally winding up in the men's personal bank accounts, Ray testified.

Columnist Drew Pearson wrote in October, 1948, that Hardy and Davison had evaded income taxes. He said their subsequent activities included "political wirepulling, concealment and dodging."

The case was presented to the United States Attorney in Richmond in July, 1949. In October, Pearson renewed his plea for speedy prosecution. The men were later indicted and pleaded nolo contendere to four counts on February 16.

Davison lives at 4404 Volta pl. nw, in the District, Hardy at Ravenwood, Falls Church. Offices of the Arlington Asphalt Co. are listed at 1756 Arlington Ridge rd.

Bowie Studies Graft Charge In Sheriff Case

A. Gwynn Bowie, State's Attorney for Prince Georges County, said yesterday his office is "studying" the case of former Sheriff R. Earle Sheriff, confessed bribe-taker.

Sheriff pleaded guilty to income tax evasion in Federal Court in Baltimore Tuesday at which time he admitted accepting $22,000 in "protection" money from gamblers from 1943 through 1946.

Bowie issued this brief statement:

"Members of the Prince Georges County State's Attorney's office are studying disclosures made in Federal Court in Baltimore on Tuesday in the R. Earle Sheriff income tax case to determine whether evidence available at this time, and applicable law, warrant presentation to the grand jury now in session."

Earlier in the day, Maryland's Attorney General Hall Hammond discussed the case in Baltimore and said it would be up to Prince Georges County authorities to determine if Sheriff should be prosecuted for bribery.

Hammond pointed out that Maryland's bribery statute is couched in broad language and it might be possible to prosecute Sheriff under it.

The law says it shall be a felony for anyone to give, demand or receive any bribe, fee, reward or testimonial for the performance, or failure to perform official duties.

Hammond said this appeared to cover the taking of money with the understanding that it was given to influence a law enforcement officer in performance of his duties. It might not be necessary to prove who made the payments, he said.

The Attorney General said the State constitution does not allow him to initiate such action unless so requested by county authorities, the Governor, or the General Assembly.

He was referring, perhaps, to the gambling investigation made in the county last year by a grand jury. This grand jury returned its report last September, declaring reports of gambling in the county were exaggerated and that such activities had reached an "almost irreducible minimum."

Sheriff is to be sentenced in Baltimore next Tuesday by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

Commission Waits Okay By Congress On Fast Time

District Fathers Express Praise For Poll Showing 3-1 Count in Favor

District residents favor daylight saving time by nearly 3 to 1, it was reported yesterday, and the Commissioners announced they will put fast time into effect when and if Congress authorizes it.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett handed the results to Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday morning after a one-week canvass in which 143,583 persons voted.

His figures showed 92,669 favoring fast time, 33,196 against and 17,718 indifferent. Nearly three out of four of the 200,000 ballots distributed were marked and returned.

Both J. R. Young and Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said they would be governed by the results in their action this year on the fast time issue. The third Commissioner, Guy Mason, is ill.

J. R. Young said the vote results would be presented at a meeting of the Board of Commissioners this morning and will be sent to the House District Committee. The House committee has asked the Commissioners for a report on a fast-time bill it is considering. It postponed action Monday to await results of the poll.

He called the poll—conducted with the aid of police and civilian block captains—a success and said it might be used again to gauge public sentiment on issues of District-wide interest.

Barrett said the public had showed "fine cooperation" and that the poll had not slowed down regular police work.

This was the final breakdown by precincts, listing the "for" count first, "against" second, "don't care" third, and total votes last:

No. 1—2214, 966, 494 and 3674; No. 2—6866, 2482, 1745 and 11,093; No. 3—11,728, 3712, 1332 and 16,772; No. 4—2941, 1381, 898 and 5220; No. 5—4838, 1740, 981 and 7559; No. 6—7010, 2244, 1327 and 10,581; No. 7—5548, 1227, 676 and 7449; No. 8—7032, 2072, 599 and 9703; No. 9—6826, 2963, 1775 and 11, 564; No. 10—10,443, 3259, 1595 and 15,297; No. 11—6651, 3231, 2799 and 12,681; No. 12—7395, 2741, 1126 and 11,262; No. 13—7927, 3349, 1341 and 12,617; No. 14—5252, 1826, 1030 and 8098. In addition, 13 ballots—10 "for" and 3 "against"—were returned to police headquarters.

An armed bandit held up and robbed the proprietor of a delicatessen at 816 18th st. nw. of about $500 last night.

George N. Kosmas told police that he was alone in the store shortly after 10 p. m. when a slim blond man in his early 30s walked in, brandishing a gun.

The robber told him to get in the back of the store, and then took the money from the cash register and an open safe, Kosmas said.

2 Men Held for Grand Jury In Rape and Robbery Case

Two men were held for the grand jury yesterday in the rape and robbery early Tuesday of Miss Pauline Hardy, 44, at her restaurant, 632 3d st. sw.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence refused to set bond for Exalton L. Francis, 28, of 349 G st. sw., charged with rape and robbery, but put bond at $1000 for James E. Johnson, 21, of 32 Q st. ne., charged only with robbery.

Superiors complimented Detective Sergt. A. H. Molee and Detectives Roland J. Reed and Shirley F. O'Neill of the robbery squad for their work on the case.

Early Tuesday three men entered the restaurant. One followed Miss Hardy into the kitchen, seized $40 from her apron pocket, then dragged her into a rear yard shed and raped her, then fled.

The speeding car containing the three men was chased by a police cruiser. After an exchange of gunfire, the trio abandoned their car and escaped.

With the car as a starting point, the detectives picked up Johnson at his home Tuesday night and arrested Francis at 6 a. m. after an all-night search of the Southwest section. The third man is still sought.

Police said Francis went to Miss Hardy's home at 3223 11th st. nw. Tuesday night and threatened her if she talked to police.

They said Francis is the one who planned the robbery and who fired at police during the chase.

Police Car Hits Truck On Way to Holdup

A detective cruiser was in collision with a tractor-trailer truck at 3:40 a. m. yesterday on the way to the scene of a holdup.

Donald M. Ubas, 24, attendant at a filling station at 6350 Georgia ave. nw., had been held up by a gunman and robbed of $65.

Detective Sergt. W. L. Sparshott and Precinct Detective Charles H. Calderwood of the robbery squad were responding to the call, siren wide open. The collision, at 13th st. and Missouri ave. nw., caused $500 damage to the police vehicle.

Sparshott and Calderwood were shaken up but did not require hospital treatment. The truck driver, Gilbert D. Adams, 39, of McKeesport, Pa., was charged with colliding.

P. S.—The bandit escaped.

House Action on D. C. Pools Deferred Till After Easter

Further conferences are expected between Federal and District officials on the question of how the Washington swimming pools will be operated this summer.

Pending the outcome of these talks, the House District Subcommittee in charge of recreation matters decided yesterday to keep hands off the pool question at least until after the House Easter recess.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), met briefly yesterday but took no action on the bill of District Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) to transfer control of six public pools here from the Interior Department to the District Commissioners.

District recreation officials who would operate the pools if they went under District control have suggested a policy of having three pools for white swimmers, two for Negroes, and the McKinley pool opened on a non-segregated basis.

Interior officials have indicated no expectation of a change in the policy of non-segregated operation of the pools. Officials said no date has been set for a meeting of District Recreation and Interior Department officials, but that one may be set in the near future.

Belt-Line Subway System Proposed for 'Hill' Workers

An idea for a round-trip Capitol Hill subway system may receive serious study by the House Office Building Commission.

The House yesterday ordered its three-member building commission to study ways to give its members transportation between their office buildings and the Capitol.

Members of the commission are Speaker Rayburn, Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), and Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.).

They got their assignment for the transportation survey from a resolution introduced by Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.). His idea was for a conveyor-belt arrangement, or moving sidewalk, to carry members.

Senators have two little monorail subway cars that carry them between their aoffice building and the Capitol.

Representative Auchincloss said he had obtained more preliminary estimates indicating that a subway system linking the House office buildings with the Capitol might be provided for less than $100,000.

He said there has also been mention of a belt line, or loop system, serving the Senate and House office buildings, the Library of Congress, Supreme Court and Capitol.

Such a development might be keyed into the program for building a new tunnel for heating and air-conditioning pipes serving the Capitol Hill buildings, it was suggested. This tunnel is part of a program authorized last year.

Smoker Blamed For Beltsville Fire

Maryland State Forester H. C. Buckingham reported yesterday he was "virtually convinced" that a careless smoker started Tuesday's forest fire on the grounds of the Agriculture Department's Beltsville Research Center.

Buckingham said the investigators have determined that the fire started near the beacon light tower on Research Center grounds. Tire tracks at the scene, he said, indicate that the careless smoker may have been a motorist.

He said the fire burned out approximately 500 acres of woodland and was Maryland's worst fire in four years.

Buckingham had particular praise for the work of 250 soldiers from Fort Meade who were among the hundreds of firefighters who helped put the seven-hour blaze under control. Fifteen Prince Georges County Volunteer fire departments also responded.

Even after the fire was declared under control, about 6:30 p. m., volunteer sentries kept an all-night vigil to insure that the blaze would not break out again. Twice in the afternoon it was thought under control.

C. A. Logan, general superintendent of the Research Center, said damage probably would not run higher than $3000 since some of the acreage was ravaged by a forest fire in 1942.

Disagreeing with the conclusion reached by Buckingham's investigators, Logan said his men would continue their investigation into the cause.

Two persons were injured in the fire, and a radio shack on the Center's grounds was destroyed. Several homes, including the estate of former Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long, were endangered.

Group Seeks Vote to Fill County Post

Efforts to get a referendum on provisions of the Sothoron Act calling for a full-time chairman of the board of county commissioners are to be begun soon in Prince Georges County.

Mrs. Irma Bogdanoff, president of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters, said yesterday that a committee of league members has been appointed to circulate a petition among the county's qualified voters on this Sothoron Act provision.

About 2500 names would be required on the petition to obtain a referendum, half of which would have to be filed by June 1 and the rest by June 30.

League objections to the existing legislation, Mrs. Bogdanoff said, include the fact that the full-time commissioner would be named by the board of commissioners, while the league feels such a post should be filled by a "professional manager whose qualifications had been demonstrated."

The league also objected to the fact that all five county commissioners, once elected, are on the "same level." The full-time commissioner could not be discharged if he proved inefficient.

The league, which met in Hyattsville Tuesday night, has voted to take up a home rule proposal at its annual May meeting. At the same time, it renewed its demand for a survey of the county government before the Sothoron Act becomes effective.

E Stewart Mitchell, Inc. of Baltimore, to do a $26,252 gravel surfacing job on Flatland rd in Kent County, beginning at the intersection of State Route 20 near Chestertown and extending 2.25 miles northwest toward Hanesville.

Coroner Holds Up Death Certificate Of Watchmaker

The body found floating in the Anacostia River Tuesday has been identified as that of Wayne P. Finley, a 39-year-old watchmaker of 2223 Prout st. se., Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald announced yesterday.

The coroner said an autopsy showed that death was due to drowning. He is withholding a certificate pending chemical analysis and further investigation.

Homicide squad Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty, who is conducting the investigation, said he has information that Finley was helping a friend paint a boat in the harbor on Monday.

The man's body, which showed no marks of violence or foul play, was identified by a friend, Wade H. Cadington, 2223 Prout st. se.

Broken Glasses Trap Man in Theft of Car

Out of a few little pieces of glass a Municipal Court case was made yesterday.

The defendant Edward W. Patalas, 28, of Walter Reed Hospital, was held under $1000 bond for grand-jury action on a charge of unauthorized use of an automobile. And it was all on account of his eyeglasses.

According to Police Pvts. Carmen Longo and Albert G. Manfredi, they responded to a radio call that an automobile had collided with a loading platform near 7th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., at 5 a. m. yesterday. Nearby they found Patalas bleeding from a headcut, they said.

The officers said Patalas told them he was injured in a fight and they took him to Gallinger Hospital for treatment.

At the hospital, the officers said they found a pair of broken eyeglasses in Patalas' pocket.

Back to the automobile the officers went, and there they found a few pieces of lens glass on the floorboard. The pieces fit perfectly in the frames, and Patalas was placed under arrest.

Then, it turned out that the automobile had been stolen earlier from Jacob S. Farmer of 212 Wayne st. se.

The officers pieced together the mystery and the broken eyeglasses before Judge Thomas D. Quinn who held Patalas for possible indictment.

Fire Wrecks Falls Church Restaurant

Three fire companies battled a blaze in a Falls Church restaurant for nearly three hours before finally subduing it early yesterday.

The fire caused damage estimated at $10,000 in Gibson's Restaurant, 200 block S. Washington st.

It started shortly after 11 p. m., an hour after closing, in the office of the one-story brick and frame building. The Falls Church fire company and two Arlington companies, from Ballston and Cherrydale, responded and fought the flames until 2 a. m.

Two firemen, Douglas Gravely of Falls Church and Raymond M. Clark of Arlington, suffered minor injuries.

The restaurant is owned by Joel Harris. His wife, Isabelle, said there were 4000 gallons of gasoline in underground tanks in front of the restaurant. But the wind was blowing away from the gas pumps. Cause of the fire was not determined.

Sewing Contest Continues Until April 15

Win a Prize With Your Easter Costume

By Peggy Preston

KEEP those needles flying this week and next if you haven't completed the garment you intend to enter in The Washington Post Sewing Contest.

For, just in case you've forgotten, closing date for entries is Saturday, April 15. That is the last day you can avail yourself of the opportunity to win a trip to New York, a cash prize, or both. So don't delay completing those final details on your garment entry.

In the event you have not yet considered entering the contest, there is still time for you to do so. According to the rules of the competition, any garment made between March 1 and April 15, 1950, may be entered. So, if you have made yourself an Easter outfit during this period, wear it in this Sunday's parade, then bring or mail it to contest headquarters. Just make sure it is entered by April 15.

Those of you who are unfamiliar with the rules of the contest may find them outlined in the official Entry Blank appearing on this page. It is important to remember that when entering a garment, this blank must be clipped from The Washington Post, filled out properly, and basted to the article of clothing.

Submit As Many Entries As You Wish

EIGHT classifications are listed and contestants may submit as many entries as they wish. A panel of judges will assemble on April 24 to select first and second place winners in each of the classifications. Cash awards totaling $560 will be made — eight first prizes of $50 each and eight second prizes of $20 each.

The eight garments taking first prize in the respective classifications will then be sent to New York for competition in the National Sewing Contest. Other contestants will be notified by announcements in The Washington Post where and when to call for submitted garments.

In New York, the eight Washington prize-winning garments will be judged along with entries from all parts of the country, and eight national winners will be named.

Three-Day New York Trip for Winners

THESE eight will then be notified by officials of the National Sewing Contest. Their awards will include a three-day trip to New York in June when they will be guests at the Waldorf-Astoria. There will be a program of entertainment in their honor, climaxed with a fashion show featuring the winning garments. In addition they will each receive a cash prize of $100.

The Washington Post Sewing Contest, a preliminary to the national event, is open to men and women of all ages within the area reached by this newspaper. There are two exceptions, however. Professional designers and dressmakers are not eligible. Neither are employes of The Washington Post or their immediate families.

Garments must fall within the classifications listed on the Entry Blank. They must be mailed or brought to The Washington Post Sewing Contest, 500 National Theater Bldg., 1325 E st. nw., Washington 4, D. C.

To avoid errors in rules, study the Entry Blank carefully. You will note that the contest is open to both those who sew by standard pattern, and those who use their own original designs. When using standard patterns it is permissible to use pieces of several, if you wish. For instance, if you like the sleeve of one pattern and the collar of another, you may employ both in your garment. Numbers of all patterns must be listed, however.

Garments will be judged for the following qualifications: (1) workmanship; (2) neatness; (3) style; (4) attractiveness; (5) suitability of style and fabric to use.

Will Mrs. Finletter Find Capital Changed Since Mrs. Barnes' Time?

By Marie McNair

MRS. THOMAS K. FINLETTER, coming back to Washington as the wife of the new Secretary of the Air Force, knows the virtues as well as the foibles of our town.

Back in the war years, when she lived in Georgetown and her husband was a State Department official, Mrs. Finletter wrote a lighthearted story for a national magazine. It was called, "Mrs. Barnes Goes to Washington."

Pure fiction, said the author, of the heroine whose prototype can be found the world over. Mrs. Barnes tells her friends that she is running down to Washington for a few diplomatic parties, promises to tell all when she gets back. She manages a casual reference to the British Embassy, the charge d'affaires of something or other, but she finds herself in over her head most of the time.

Conversation at a wartime cocktail party runs like this:

MALE GUEST: The OSS is going to swallow up the OWI.

MRS. BARNES, brightly: Are they? I mean is he? You know I'm a stranger here. Do point out some of the famous people.

To the new Air Force Secretary's wife, Washington then was a "very elusive scene to try to catch."

Wonder what she'll think of it now? And will she put it down in words?

Daughter of Famous Composer

ONE OF THE four Damrosch sisters, daughters of the famous composer and conductor—Mrs. Finletter has been writing "on and off" for a number of years.

When she returned to New York right after the war's close, Gretchen Finletter returned to her first love—the theater. She wrote a play, "Brief Holiday" a comedy which opened on Broadway following a tryout at the Cleveland Playhouse.

But having a play on Broadway is nothing new to her. Almost a score of years ago—1931 to be exact—she made her debut as a playwright with "The Passing Present," produced by Arthur Hopkins. Since then she's written innumerable magazine stories, most of them dealing with the Junior Miss.

The Finletters have two daughters, Lili and Margot, both of whom have married since they lived here. Lili is Mrs. Cass Canfield, jr., and Margot is now Mrs. John F. B. Mitchell, jr.

Pakistan Dinner Party

THE PAKISTAN Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani entertained at a buffet dinner last evening at the embassy. Sir Mohamed Zafrulla Khan, Foreign Minister of Pakistan was a guest and others in the group were Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George McGhee, Undersecretary of the Navy and Mrs. Dan Kimball, Mr. and Mrs. Harding Bancroft, Mr. and Mrs. James Shepley and Herbert Elliston.

Betty McFarlane to Be Bride

PLANS FOR a June wedding are being made by Betty Ann McFarlane, daughter of former Representative and Mrs. William Doddridge McFarlane, whose engagement to Herbert Edgar Morris is announced today. Mr. Morris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Carey Morris of Indian Lake, Denville, N. J.

Miss McFarlane is a student at Texas State College for Women at Denton, is serving as counselor and dormitory assistant at Sayers Hall. She is a member of Sigma Tau Delta, honorary English fraternity. Her maternal grandparents are Judge and Mrs. J. F. Carl of Edinburg, Tex.; and Judge and Mrs. R. W. McFarlane of Graham, Tex., are her paternal grandparents. Mr. McFarlane, father of the bride-to-be is now special assistant to the Attorney General.

Mr. Morris attended Rutgers University. During the war he was a member of the Special Service Force which fought in the European and Mediterranean area. He holds a commission as colonel on the Governor's staff of Louisiana.

The wedding will take place June 16 in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church with Dr. John W. Rustin officiating.

Miss Betts Engaged

ANOTHER ENGAGEMENT being made known today is that of Miss Matilda Betts, daughter of Mrs. Edward Chambers Betts and the late Brigadier General Betts, and William Franklin Radcliff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Radcliff of Fredericksburg, Ind.

The bride-to-be was graduated from Holton Arms School and Vassar and is now executive secretary of Jango. Her father was professor of law at the United States Military Academy, and during World War II was theater judge advocate of the European theater of operations for more than four years. He died in Germany in 1946.

Mr. Radcliff served five years in the Army during the war and was released from the service with the rank of major. He's a graduate of Yale in 1948 and is now a student at the University of Indiana School of Law. He is a member of Sigma Delta Kappa legal fraternity and the Yale Club of Indianapolis. The wedding will take place this summer.

Miss Boswell Honored

MISS MARGARET EILEEN MUND, daughter of Col. E. J. Mund, Marine Corps, and Mrs. Mund, entertained at a surprise linen shower on Tuesday in honor of Miss Marjorie Boswell, whose engagement to Seth Vining of Tryon, N. C. has been announced.

Miss Lillian Hamilton was at the tea table, assisted by Mrs. Charles Myers and Mrs. Robert Menson. Pink sweet peas decorated the bride-elect's cake.

De Stackelbergs Are Dinner Hosts

Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg entertained at dinner last evening to welcome home Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Richard Cutts who have just returned to their home at The Plains, Va. after a European trip. General and Mrs. Cutts and Mrs. de Stackelberg are old friends, having met several years ago in China.

Girl Asks How to Tell Difference Between Love and Infatuation; She Is Bewildered By Effrontery of Boy She Had Most Admired

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a senior in high school and well informed on the facts of life. I look forward to being a wife and mother and believe that I have an ardent nature. My mother has done a good job of teaching me what is right and what is wrong, and I wouldn't let her down for the world. But how can I tell the difference between infatuation and love?

I think I love Bill, a college freshman who seemed to be all that I ever hoped to find in a man. I enjoyed his company and kisses, and was dreaming of a time when we could be married. Then he suggested an affair—a shock to me. I had thought he was better than that; and since a fellow always can tell in a very short time just what a girl will permit, I am sure he must have known that I wouldn't have an affair with him, even if I was in love.

When I expressed myself, he gave me a choice—either an affair or we'd never date again. I still said no, but was I wrong? It has worried me almost to death, because he did mean so much to me. I've been dating for several years. Bill meant more to me than anyone else, yet he was the first to suggest an affair. I'm not used to being treated that way.

He goes to college 200 miles from here, so we dated not oftener than twice a month. Sometimes I wonder if he is worth worrying about. Yet I keep hoping that he will come back with a change of heart. Should I date him if he does, or would I be wasting my time? Did he really love me; or did he only want me to think he did? R. E.

Love Is Magnanimous

DEAR R. E.: It seems to me the difference between infatuation and love is easily told. Infatuation is synonymous with craving, and is intent on self gratification, whereas love is interested in promoting the beloved's welfare. As Scripture says, love "Seeketh not her own,"—meaning that it is unselfish and of the spirit. To speak in the vernacular, it is "not from hunger."

About you and Bill, it seems to me that you didn't quite love him, although your emotions were moving in that general direction, and that he didn't love you at all. He was merely reacting attentively to your enticements, up to the time he broke away in irritation.

From his viewpoint you probably seemed dishonest, on the one hand permitting, perhaps even encouraging lovemaking to a degree that severely tried his emotional control; and on the other hand sounding a moralist note about your principles, to let him know you were a nice girl. A socially inexperienced young lad might be captivated by that type of come-on game. But a wolf or an older boy who's been around just won't put up with it for long. It ends in bad feeling usually.

Hero-Worship Was 'From Hunger'

IN DEMANDING an affair as the price of his company, Bill automatically forfeits tolerance, in my opinion. And if his ultimatum wasn't a calculated maneuver to break up a relationship that had begun to bore him, then at least you may be sure that he has no respect for your character and no interest in your welfare. Consequently, any time spent with him would be time wasted, even if he should drop back to report an alleged change of heart.

Your yen for Bill was "from hunger," I think; and perhaps from the first he was "on the make." In any event, your idealization of him was a pipe dream; something that came out of your head, not justified by his real qualities.

Fortunately you weren't badly scarred when the myth exploded in your face. My advice is to close the book on that episode, and next time, don't play with fire when you're trying to gain wholehearted allegiance. M. H.

For Easter Sunday
THE LIFE OF CHRIST IN PICTURE FORM

ON EASTER SUNDAY, The Washington Post will publish one of the most striking religious pictures ever painted—a panoramic canvas of the Life of Christ. This picture starts with the mission of the angel Gabriel to Nazareth and concludes with the announcement of the Resurrection to the two Marys. Forty-six episodes are portrayed in all, yet in this full account of the story there is a remarkable artistic and dramatic unity. The artist, Ayres Houghtelling, has succeeded in creating a modern version of the story-telling technique found in the tapestries of the middle ages.

This picture will be reproduced in Sunday's Washington Post, the full width of the newspaper page. It will be accompanied with a key to the scenes, which will easily enable the reader to follow the story in the picture.

Southern Maryland Readers Submit Suggestions on How to Stuff The Traditional Easter Ham

SOUTHERN MARYLANDERS have come to the rescue!

Ever since a question on "stuffed ham" appeared in the column the other day, I've been receiving tips on preparing this traditional Easter dish of the lower "Free State."

First suggestion made by a reader was to contact Mrs. J. William Roberts, of near Landover, who cooks two of these hams with kale-mint-wild-onion stuffing every Easter. She was kind enough to give me her recipe in some detail.

It seems she always uses hams cured the preceding fall, so they won't be so hard to stuff. She simmers them half done—about 15 minutes per pound for a 15-pound ham. Then, with skin left on, the ham top is jabbed about 20 times clear to the bone with a carving knife.

Stuffing is poked into these pockets with the fingers—4 quarts shredded kale, 1 cup mint leaves, 1 cup chopped wild onion tops, 1 teaspoon red pepper, and 2 teaspoons salt. Hot water is poured over the greens in advance to make them easier to stuff.

The ham is sewed up in a cloth bag after stuffing and simmered done—about 15 minutes more per pound. Slices of the ham are most attractive looking, says Mrs. Roberts, with veins of green through the pink meat. She serves it cold for Easter Sunday breakfast, along with a little vinegar, plenty of hot biscuits, and coffee.

Another reader, Miss Minnie L. Goodwin, 805 C st. nw., writes that southern Maryland "Easter dinner would not be complete without stuffed ham" so evidently she would serve it later in the day. Her recipe is similar to Mrs. Roberts but calls only for kale and green onions, "tops and all," in the stuffing.

Mrs. J. F. Neale of Washington says that she has the ham boned and stuffs the greens inside the cavity where the bone was removed.

Her stuffing recipe for an 8 to 10-pound ham is as follows: 1 package kale, 1 dozen bunches spring onions, 1 dozen dried onions, 3 or 4 sweet red peppers, 2 ounces celery seed, and red pepper. She puts the unstuffed ham on in cold water, takes it off when water boils. This liquid is used to scald the chopped greens. The ham is then stuffed, surrounded by any extra greens, sewed in a bag and boiled done.

DEAR ANNE:

Please advise me the proper way to make out a check to a physician. Do I make it payable to "Dr. John Doe," to "John Doe, M. D." or just "John Doe"?

K. L. B.
Arlington.

I'm told by the Doctors' Business Bureau that the correct way to write the check is to "Dr. John Doe."

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me a recipe for an apple pie that has cheese baked inside the crust instead of just served along with it?

W. E. J.

Cheese custard plus apples makes this a flavorful treat:

CHATEAU APPLE PIE

1 cup evaporated milk	2 eggs, slightly beaten
½ pound shredded cheese	1/3 cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt	½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups apples, sliced	¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell

Scald evaporated milk in double boiler. Add cheese and salt and stir until cheese melts. Gradually stir in eggs. Combine sugar, cinnamon, and nutmeg and sprinkle over thinly sliced apples. Put apples into unbaked pie shell. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees) 15 minutes. Then turn down gas to reduce oven heat to 325 degrees. Pour custard mixture over apples in pie shell. Continue baking until sharp knife inserted near center of pie comes out clean—about 35 minutes. Cool and serve.

DEAR ANNE:

Please find out for me the name of the agency which handles the combination baby product consisting of high chair, stroller, table and chair set, youth chair, carriage, basinette, car bed and car seat, which are all in one piece of equipment.

M. W.
Washington.

This certainly must be the work of a genius! I haven't been able to find anything quite so versatile on the local market.

Baby furniture sections of most department stores carry combination chairs-and-tables, of course. Then there's a play or feeding table with adjustable seat in the center. The whole thing can be raised to dinner table level or lowered to 22 inches. It's mounted on large casters so it can be moved around, can be purchased with a canopy for outdoor use. It folds up so you can take it along in the car on trips, and can be converted into a regular flat-topped table when desired. Call Lincoln 3-3000 to contact the agency for this product.

Hospitals Ask $766,500 in Federal Funds

Four requests totaling $766,500 for Federal aid funds to be used in hospital construction were submitted yesterday to the District Hospital Advisory Council.

The council, set up by the District Health Department to pass on applications for Federal funds under the Hill-Burton Act, deferred action on the requests for further study because of the uncertainty of funds available in 1950. The council will meet again in two weeks.

Casualty Hospital requested $262,000 for an addition of 92 beds.

George Washington University Hospital asked $200,000 for a new cancer clinic, administrative, laboratory and ancilliary facilities.

Sinai House applied for $18,000 for a children's mental hospital to accommodate 40.

Children's Hospital asked for an additional $286,500 to supplement the $598,000 granted previously for new construction.

The Council recommended to Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger that efforts be made to raise the Federal appropriations for hospital construction from 75 million to the level of 150 million which prevailed in 1950.

Dr. Seckinger reported the number of acceptable general hospital beds in the District last February 1 was 2491, an increase of 380 over the 2111 beds available in December, 1947.

"No progress, however, can be reported in categories other than general," he said.

Same Store, Same Safe, New Theft

The Elizabeth Shepherd Dress Shop, 3306 Reservoir rd. nw., gets some queer visitors—and all of them head straight for the safe.

First it was a man with a goatee. Now a "thin man" or maybe a midget. Oh, dear.

On March 30, the man with the goatee entered the store and told employes he was the "cleanup man." He busied himself briefly, then departed to "get a bucket." He had cleaned up, but good. There was $380 missing from an open safe.

Yesterday at 9 a. m., Mrs. Shepherd opened her store and found the same safe, a small cabinet type, pried open and another $800 gone.

Police found that the thief had entered through a ventilator shaft in the rear of the store, slid down the shaft, bent back fan blades and squeezed through.

"A real thin man—or a midget," they declared.

But it couldn't have been old goatface who did the original cleanup job. He was of stocky build.

Bids to Alter Montgomery Jail Opened

First steps in the program to make Montgomery County jail more escape proof were revealed yesterday by two county officials.

Control of the jail scene of one successful and two abortive breaks in recent months, was transferred from the sheriff to the County Council in an emergency law passed by the General Assembly in February.

Bids for alterations in the jail's physical facilities are now being solicited, County Manager Irving G. McNayr said. These include installation of tempered steel bars from the parapet wall to the courthouse roof to block escapes from cells or cell blocks; a new type of window screen; plate steel doors; and an improved alarm system.

At the same time, Personnel Director Ben Hall announced that experienced applicants are being sought for four jobs in the jail. The positions are jail supervisor, two guards and one combination cook-guard.

Judge Spurns Board, Grants Liquor Permit

A license to sell liquor was ordered given to Fred K. Kramer, operator of the Knotty Pine Tavern, Berwyn, Md., yesterday by Judge J. Dudley Digges in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md.

Judge Digges reversed the previous action of the County Liquor Board which had refused to grant the license on the grounds there were sufficient licenses already in the incorporated limits of College Park.

Kramer had operated the tavern and several years ago leased it. The lessee encountered financial reverses anad turnd back the property but refused to sign the transfer of the liquor license, necessitating Kramer's application for a new license.

Arlington Board Asks More Fiscal Data for 3 Years

The Arlington County Board has asked for additional information comparing estimated and actual revenues and expenditures in the county for the past three years, Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg said today.

Lundberg, who has already submitted his more than five-million-dollar budget to the county board for consideration, said he will have answers to a list of 10 questions ready for the board at its meeting this Saturday.

Citizens' Unit Votes Against Home Rule Bill

The Crestwood Citizens Association opposed the Federation of Citizens Associations' stand on the Kefauver home-rule bill last night.

The group adopted a resolution saying, "We are not in accord with the action taken by the federation . . . and are in favor of the House District Committee's position. We neither believe this is a home-rule bill, nor are we in favor of changing our present form of government."

Support of the McMillan bill transferring control of the District recreation facilities from the Department of Interior to the District Recreation Board was also favored by the association, without dissent.

Other business at the meeting in Roosevelt Senior High School, 13th and Upshur sts. nw., included a talk on Americanism by former Representative Calvin D. Johnson of Illinois.

Washington Highlands

Opposition to both fare increases and abolishment of the weekly pass on the Capital Transit vehicles was voiced by the Washington Highlands Citizens Association last night.

The group, meeting at Patterson School, S. Capitol and Darrington sts. sw., also favored a five-day, 40-hour-week for the Metropolitan Police, and urged that the S. Capitol st. bridge be called just that.

In other business, the master plan of playground development for the area was discussed by Harry C. English, director of neighborhood centers of the D. C. Recreation Department, and Robert W. Andrews, assistant superintendent of the Recreation Department.

Falls Church Will Extend School Census

A special Falls Church school census, begun last October, will be extended to include all children within the 11-square-mile area Falls Church wants to annex from Fairfax County, the city school board was informed last night.

School Superintendent Irvin Schmitt told the board that statistics on the school population of the annexable area should be ready two weeks before the June 13 date set for trial of the city's annexation suit in Fairfax Circuit Court.

Schmitt said the census so far shows the city must provide for a 60 percent increase in students within the next five years, "even if nobody moves in."

The board also received a revised budget at the half-way mark of its fiscal year, showing a $32,000 increase in its expected surplus of $56,993 by July 1, 1950. Most of the increase is due to higher tax revenues than were originally expected, according to the budget report.

The board also approved a low bid of $1422 from the Earl Electric Co., of Arlington, for installation of a fire alarm system, exit lights and some fire escape lighting at the Madison-Jefferson School.

Choruses Sing 'Dream Of Gerontius'

By Paul Hume

An act of faith and love was performed last night in Washington Cathedral.

There, before a filled church, the Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies, directed by Paul Callaway, sang The Dream of Gerontius, by Sir Edward Elgar. The immense religious drama portrayed in music was heard for the first time in Washington.

The text of the work is by Cardinal Newman. It portrays the final mortal moments of a just soul and then narrates his journey and sensations after death. The lines are filled with deepest meaning for those who listen with open hearts. Coming in the midst of Holy Week, the music and its exposition gave a profound experience.

Callaway added to the combined choruses his Cathedral Choir of men and boys, singing from the north gallery. The expensive orchestral score was performed by a large number of the National Symphony, who played beautifully.

It was the most expressive and sensitive choral singing we have heard in Washington Cathedral, or anywhere else in this city. The great chorus sang with incredible restraint when required, and with overwhelming majesty and thrilling tone in climactic passages.

Answering them from the gallery heights, the perfection of the Cathedral Choir was a thing of marvels. The boys at the Cathedral proved themselves musicians and supreme vocalists.

There are three soloists in Gerontius. William Hess carries the major burden, in the name part. We have often heard him but never with greater pleasure.

Eunice Alberts surpassed her previous work too as the Guardian Angel. The ease and color of her singing was precisely the right tone. Her voice opened up in great moments of unexpected glory.

Edwin Steffe as both Priest and Angel of the Agony, commanded a sonority fitting the part. His voice rode the chorus at will, yet became subdued to the softest breath.

But give praise to soloists, choruses, and orchestra, with equal praise to Richard Dirksen in the important organ writing and the mainspring of the evening is still elsewhere.

Music such as Gerontius must be understood, as must its text, if it is to have proper inflection and message. Then it must be interpreted with both technique and art. We have often heard and praised Paul Callaway in these columns. We can do no less today. The finish, spiritual devotion, and authority with which he gave the work set another standard to remember. We cannot sufficiently express our gratitude.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Vatican Radio Performed 'Duty of Asyle' for War Stricken

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

Chapter XIX—World Brotherhood

FROM a height in the Vatican gardens rises the slender mast of the powerful Vatican radio, built under the supervision of the inventor of wireless, Marconi. A commemorative plaque dedicates its service: "That the voice of the supreme shepherd in honor of Christ the King may be heard through the waves of the ether to the end of the globe for the salvation of souls." Its signature tunes are the bells of St. Peter and the Latin greeting "Laudeatur Jesu Christus" ("Let Us Praise Jesus Christ").

Right through the war the Vatican radio speakers sent mostly names, names, and again names of those in 65 languages 27,000 names a month—telling the whereabouts of prisoners and civilians caught by the maelstrom of total war. The Nazi government forbade the transmission of addresses of German prisoners, the German people were not allowed by its rulers to accept this help from the Holy Father but all the same thousands of German names found their way to families to whom it meant release from mortal anguish.

Vatican Relief continued during the worst years following the war; in 1947 and 1948 alone ten thousand million lira were spent on suits of clothes, dresses, shoes, stockings, and woolen underwear —which went to homes for the aged and hospitals, to children and students, to distressed people all over Europe, immaterial of their nationality, their race or their faith.

The Duty of Asyle

"LOVE thy neighbor as thy brother," how truly this admonition became when the Pope drew attention to paragraph 1179 of the Codex of Canon Law which imposes on all churches and convents the duty of asyle, gives the right of shelter to whosoever asks for it. For hiding a Jew, the parish priest of Lucca—Don Aldo Mei—was executed by the fascist government, but even this severe example did not frighten the Church Militant.

In a Jesuit Church in Rome, the space between the nave and the roof proper was turned into small cells to provide a hiding place for prominent Jews. Nobody but the local priests knew that above this gaudy painted heaven of blue sky, golden stars and fleecy clouds, with their choirs of angels and cherubs, lay a purgatory of hunted men. So as not to betray the secret, every man in hiding there was given a name corresponding to the altar or the statue of the saint above whom he was lodged. Fascist stool pigeons, if they did overhear that the breakfast for St. Ignatius was ready, that a message had come for St. Francis, or that the laundry of St. Aloysius had to be done, took it for pious idiosyncrasies.

And when during the German occupation of Rome the Nazis demanded an impossible tribute in gold for allowing the synagogue to remain open, the Pope ordered that sufficient gold from the treasures of St. Peter was to be handed to the chief Rabbi of Rome to enable him to meet the German demand.

His Fervent Wishes

WAR CAME to an end by May 1945. On May 10, the fifth anniversary of the invasion of the Low Countries, the Pope sent a telegram to the rulers of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg with his fervent wishes for a happier future. From the moment that hostilities had ceased, his thoughts went out to help the vanquished German people, now reeling under the impact of all the hatred which years of Nazi aggression had accumulated among the nations which Hitler had turned into enemies and which now ruled Germany as conquerors.

Addressing the Cardinals in June, 1945, the Pope spoke of his faith in the German people "whose great gifts I have learned to know during the 12 years that I lived among them." And he expressed his conviction that they will rise again "to a new dignity and a new life."

A few months afterward, in a letter to Cardinal Von Faulhaber, Archbishop of Munich, and a fearless opponent of nazism, he wrote of "those millions of Catholics and other Christians in Germany who battled against evil and remained loyal to the teachings of the Gospel. We must declare again it is against all truth and facts to condemn an entire nation for the evil committed by the adherents of one party." When stark famine stalked Germany in 1946, he made a special broadcast directed to all countries that were able to help, especially to the United States, to relieve Germany's hunger and misery and he cried out: "What does it matter where the responsibility lies or what is whose share in the crimes that have been committed or who were the accessories to these misdeeds, either by submission or through omission—what is needed is sufficient help immediately!"

Picked Bishop Munch

SINCE Germany had ceased to be for the moment a sovereign independent state, he appointed a delegate to look after the former Nunciature in Germany. He selected for that crucial post an American, Monsignor Aloysius Munch, Bishop of Fargo, North Dakota, who took up residence at Kronberg near the seat of the American Government in Germany.

To speed the peace treaties, and meanwhile to send the prisoners of war home, was another of his constant preoccupations in the years immediately following the cessation of hostilities. He made it the subject of his reply to the congratulations of the diplomatic corps on his name-day.

"We know full well"—thus spoke the well-versed diplomat and lawyer—"that the cold paragraphs of international law cannot force the conquerors to free their prisoners before a peace treaty is concluded, but"—so the pontiff added—"the spiritual and moral needs of the prisoners and of their families grow ever heavier and the sacred rights of marriage and of the family cry louder to heaven than all legal paragraphs."

"History since the end of the war is not glorious," so the Pope spoke, referring to the enforced mass exile of close on 10 millions of Germans who because of their race and speech were thrown by the new Polish government out of provinces which had been German for centuries, and by the Czech government out of the Sudetenland, a German settlement since untold generations. "We know the extent and the depth of the terror with which a now vanquished system has destroyed the face of Europe," the Pope said, "but another system is now rearing its head which bids fair to rival it."

Thank God and You

Each night I thank Almighty God . . . That you belong to me . . . Because I am so happy in . . . Your loving company . . . Your faith inspires me to reach . . . A greater goal each day . . . Your solace is the rainbow bright . . . That draws my tears away . . . Your kindly spirit comforts me . . . When I am sad and blue . . . And everything that I achieve . . . Is just because of you . . . I know that I must fill my place . . . Whatever I prefer . . . But in the happiness you give . . . My life is easier . . . And so I thank Almighty God . . . And praise your gentle heart . . . And constantly I pray that we . . . Will never be apart.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Ought to Open a Charge Account

Anybody who brings a car downtown every day is bound to get a parking ticket now and again.

Like everybody else, I've paid my dues at the nearest precinct at periodic intervals, gotten a receipt from the station clerk and gone my way to sin again. The receipts used to get dog-eared in a coat pocket for a few days, then were thrown away.

But from now on, I think I'll keep those receipts for several months. Lightning has struck me twice in less than a year.

A few months ago a policeman came to my door to inform me that I had failed to register a parking ticket. I said that was impossible.

"Do you have a receipt?" he asked. To my complete amazement I fished the proper receipt out of a raincoat pocket in which it had been forgotten for several weeks.

The officer compared the "book" and "ticket" numbers, and then conceded: "That's it, all right. Somebody slipped up. I'm sorry to have bothered you."

And just the other day, it happened again. "This is Officer Gaylor, warrant clerk at No. 1," said the pleasant voice at the other end of the line. "I've got an open ticket against you, so we'd like to give you a chance to register it before we have to get a warrant on it."

I protested that there must be some mistake, and that I'd find the receipt. He said fine, and meantime he'd check the records.

By the time I found my receipt, Officer Gaylor had found a record of my three buck payment. He apologized for the other policeman's mistake, and once again I escaped the bastille.

But from now on I'm going to file those receipts with my insurance policies. Captain Covell's lads at No. 1 are polite enough—but if those records ever get messed up I don't want to get carted off to the jailhouse some morning before I've had a chance to read Povich and drink my coffee.

CLUB NEWS

It all started back on St. Patrick's Day. Husbands who shop in the Dorchester House food market playfully renamed the proprietors of the establishment "Patrick O'Zimel" and "Shean Fitz-Swartzman."

All concerned were pleased with the joke, and kidded about it for several days.

On April Fool's Day, six of the husbands found themselves in a queue at the meat counter, each with shopping list in hand. Smitty the Butcher and Alfonso Rector the green-goods specialist couldn't resist a bit of reverse-lend-lease humor, directed at the customers.

They ordained the creation of "The Husbands Club"—Washington's newest and most exclusive stag organization. Charter members include five men who are prominent on the Hill and one chap who will probably never amount to anything, because he's a former newspaperman.

To be eligible for membership, applicants must:

1. Be a husband in active practice.
2. Know how to select lettuce, as well as bring home the spending type.
3. Be sufficiently expert at marketing to buy just enough extra things which are not on the shopping list to avert additional trips to the market, and
4. Be able to resist the temptation to buy those extras which will land them in the dog house.

Applications for membership must be directed to the proprietors. Charter members have formed a separate group known as "Husbands Anonymous."

They are pledged to keep their identities secret until they work out a fool-proof way of getting reimbursed for the money they spend while marketing for their wives.

If they ever succeed, I for one will be willing to concede it's the greatest advance in the history of mankind since the invention of the can opener.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Sen. Elmer Thomas Probes Leak

By Drew Pearson

Oklahoma's surly Senator "Cotton Elmer" Thomas was so burned up after this column corrected his version of General Bradley's secret testimony on the possibility of war that Thomas has now ordered a Senate subcommittee to investigate.

Sen. Thomas

The subcommittee is supposed to find out how this column got General Bradley's secret testimony. Senator Thomas had reported to the press that Bradley was not worried about war with Russia. To keep the record straight, however, this column gave a word-by-word account of Bradley's remarks, which differed considerably from Senator Thomas' version.

After this, "Cotton Elmer" named three Senators to investigate this columnist—Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Willis Robertson of Virginia and Homer Ferguson of Michigan. They are now checking on all the secret transcripts to find which one might have slipped into Drew Pearson's hands. What stumps the investigators, however, is that the column also quoted what General Bradley said off the record—which doesn't even appear in the stenographic transcripts.

So far, the subcommittee suspects a certain Republican Senator of leaking the story to Pearson, but I can assure the subcommittee that its chief suspect wasn't even present during Bradley's testimony.

Meanwhile, this column serves notice that any time a responsible official is misquoted on anything the public is entitled to know about, the column will do its best to get the true facts.

More to Investigate

What Bradley said, summed up briefly, was that Russia won't have the industrial capacity or the atomic stockpile to start a war for at least two years. However, he warned that Russia is a bully nation and might get careless about whom she pushes around. He also refused to predict what Russia might do after two years.

General Bradley also made other significant observations the public is entitled to know, but which this column didn't have space to print in the story now being investigated. So here is some more for the investigators to investigate.

Senator Burnet Maybank of South Carolina questioned Bradley sharply on whether the 13-billion-dollar budget was an absolute minimum.

"I certainly would hate to see the figure become any smaller," replied Bradley. Then he declared flatly: "This amount was determined before we learned that Russia had the atomic bomb."

He assured, however, that he was willing to go along with a 13-billion-dollar budget for the sake of economy.

"In other words," suggested Massachusetts' Senator Leverett Saltonstall, "as a good citizen you believe we should live within our means."

"Yes, but I would like to qualify that," Bradley hesitated.

"You don't want to qualify the good citizen part," smiled Saltonstall.

Then Bradley explained: "The eventual strength of our country depends upon its industrial capacity. We must not destroy that by spending too much from year to year. So if I came here recommending 30 or 40 billion dollars for defense, you should start searching for a new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. . . .

"It is true that our forces—ground, air and Navy—are not sufficient now to fight a major war," Bradley emphasized. "Nor do we expect to be sufficient for such a calamity by the end of fiscal year 1951," he continued. "But I feel that we are going to achieve the necessary forces to prevent a disastrous attack from crippling this Nation. I also believe that we will be able to win a war if it comes."

He predicted that this country's "mobilization base"—its industrial potential, reserve forces and military education system—would "win a war if it is thrust upon us."

"This is a risk that we take," solemnly added the Chief of Staff.

Unification?

Outspoken Admiral Dan Gallery, whose ideas about an all-powerful Navy have got him into the military doghouse, was brooding over a fire that damaged his home.

"I don't blame it on the Air Force," he confided to an Air Force friend. "I think Secretary of Defense Johnson started it."

Headless Bureau

When hard-driving, imaginative Secretary of the Air Force Stuart Symington changes desks to run the National Security Resources Board, he will find an outfit about as full of snap as a worn-out spring. On the books, the NSRB has the vital job of blueprinting civil defense, relocating industries, finding the most effective use of resources, and planning for regulating production, manpower, and Government facilities in time of emergency.

But, this all-important board has been both leaderless and kicked around by agencies that should be obeying its orders.

JUST TWO more shopping days until Easter, so do let us tell you about all of the good foods at Center Market City.

If you're planning on an Easter Ham, you'll find one of the finest selection of hams in the city here under our roof. Almost every meat stand at the Market has Easter hams . . . and they range in size and flavor from boneless ready-cooked ham to the good old Virginia hickory-smoked variety.

BIG, blooming hydrangeas are all over the Market this week. Their colors range from light mauve to an almost-purple, and such pretty plants they are for Easter delivery. Surely the flowers of Easter are the prettiest of the season! Tulips, azaleas, and of course Easter Lillies are also here for picking up yourself or for delivery.

THE FRUIT and vegetable stands are also things of beauty. So fresh and green the produce of Spring. New potatoes, new peas, asparagus, salad greens of every description, eggplant, strawberries, green beans—these are but a few of the fresh vegetables awaiting Washington Easter tables.

THE CAKE and cookie stands are ready with special Easter cakes and cookies, too. One very pretty one we we noticed was a chocolate layer cake with green trimming and colored Easter eggs on top.

FRED WEIGERT would like for us to tell you about his new supply of Bockwurst sausage, too. This popular German sausage is a sell-out every time we mention it, so we'd advise you to shop early for yours. Nice idea for Easter morning breakfast, or brunch.

IF FRESH vegetables are on your menu this week, and of course they are, we'd like to tell you about the fresh greens at the fruit and vegetable stands. Early green peas are on market . . . eggplant is available . . . and broccoli and brussels sprouts. If you're planning on strawberry shortcake, you'll find them in good sizes and fresh - as - when-picked. New potatoes are here for the peas, and if you're serving Spring lamb on Easter Sunday, do accompany it with fresh peas and new potatoes. Frozen vegetables are wonderful, but somehow or other, nothing tastes as good as fresh vegetables.
